How honourable ladies sought my love,
Which I denying they fell sick and died Shakesp

He his fabrick of the heav'ns
Hath left to their disputes, perhaps to move
His laughter at their quaint opinions wide
Hereafter Milton's Paradise Lost

5. Quaint is, in Spenser, quailed, depressed. I believe by a very licentious irregularity.

With such fair slight him Guyon fall'd
Till at the last, all breathless, weary and faint,
Him spying, with fresh onset he assail'd,
And kindling new his courage, seeming quaint,
Struck him so hugely, that through great constraint
He made him stoop Spenser

6. Affected, foppish. This is not the true idea of the word, which Swift seems not to have well understood.

To this we owe those monstrous productions, which under the name of trips, spins, amusements, and other conceited appellations, have over-run us, and I wish I could say, those quaint fopperies were wholly absent from graver subjects Swift

QUAI'NTLY. adv [from quaint]

1. Nicely; exactly; with petty elegance.

When was old Sherewood's hair more quaintly curl'd,
Or Nature's cradle more enchas'd and purl'd? Ben Jonson

2. Artfully.

Breathe his faults so quaintly,
That they seem the taints of liberty,
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind Shakesp

3. Ingeniously with success. This is not the true sense.

2 A brawl, a petty fight; a scuffle

If I can fasten but one cup upon him,
With that which he hath drank to-night already,
He'll be as full of quarrel and offence,
As my young mistress' dog Shakesp Othello

3. A dispute, a contest

The quarrel which in this present part, striveth against the current and stream of laws, was a long while nothing feared Hooker

It were a matter of more trouble than necessity to repent in this quarrel what has been alledged by the worthies of our church Holyday

As if earth too narrow were for fate,
On open seas their quarrels they debate,
In hollow wood they floating armies bear,
And force imprison'd winds to bring 'em near.
Dryden.

4 A cause of debate

I could not die any where so contented, as in the king's company, his cause being just, and his quarrel honourable Shakesp

If not in service of our God we fought,
In meaner quarrel if this sword were shaken,
Well might thou gather in the gentle thought,
So fair a princess should not be forsaken Fairfax.

5. Something that gives a right to mischief, reprisal, or action.

QUICKSI'GHTEDNESS. n. s. [from quicksighted] Sharpness of sight.

The ignorance that is in us no more hinders the knowledge that is in others, than the blindness of a mole is an argument against the quicksightedness of an eagle Locke.

QUICKSI'LVER. n. s. [quick and silver; argentum vivum, Lat.]

Quicksilver, called mercury by the chymists, is a naturally fluid mineral, and the heaviest of all known bodies next to gold, and is the more heavy and fluid, as it is more pure, it is wholly volatile in the fire, and may be driven up in vapour by a degree of heat very little greater than that of boiling water. It is the least tenacious of all bodies, and every [illegible] drop may be again subdivided by the lightest touch into a multitude of others. The specifick gravity of pure mercury is to water as 14000 to 1000, and as it is the heaviest of all fluids, it is also the coldest, and when heated the hottest. The ancients all esteemed quicksilver a poison, nor was it brought into internal use, till about two hundred and twenty years ago, which was first occasioned by the shepherds, who ventured to give it their sheep to kill worms, and as they received no hurt by it, it was soon concluded, that men might take it safely in time, the diggers in the mines, when they found it crude, swallowed it in vast quantities, in order to sell it privately, when they had voided it by stool but the miners seldom follow their occupation above three or four years, and the artificers, who have much dealing in it, are generally seised with paralytick disorders. Hill.

Mercury is very improperly called a metal, for though it has weight and similarity of parts, it is neither dissolvable by fire, malleable, nor fixed it seems to constitute a particular class of fossils, and is rather the mother or basis of all metals, than a metal itself mercury is of considerable use in gilding, making looking-glasses, in refining gold, and various other mechanical operations besides medicine Chambers.

Cinnabar maketh a beautiful purple like unto a red rose; the best was wont to be made in Libia, of brimstone and quicksilver burnt. Peacham.

Pleasures are few, and fewer we enjoy,
Pleasure, like quicksilver, is bright and coy;
We strive to grasp it with our utmost skill,
Still it eludes us, and it glitters still.
If seiz'd at last, compute your mighty gains,
What is it, but rank poison in your veins? Young

QUICKSI'LVERED. adj. [from quicksilver.] Overlaid with quicksilver.

Metal is more difficult to polish than glass, and is afterwards very apt to be spoiled by tarnishing, and reflects not so much light as glass quicksilvered over does, I would propound to use instead of the metal a glass ground concave on the foreside, and as much convex on the backside, and quicksilvered over on the convex side. Newton's Opticks.

QUI'DAM. n. s. [Lat.] Somebody. Not now used.

For envy of so many worthy quidams, which catch at the garland, which to you alone is due, you will be persuaded to pluck out of the hateful darkness those so many excellent poems of yours, which lie hid, and bring them forth to eternal light. Spenser.

To QUI'VER. v. n.

1. To quake; to play with a tremulous motion.

The birds chaunt melody on every bush,
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind Shakesp.

O'er the pommel cast the knight,
Forward he flew, and pitching on his head,
He quiver'd with his feet, and lay for dead. Dryd.
With what a spring his furious soul broke loose,
And left the limbs still quivering on the ground. Addison.
Eurydice with quiv'ring voice he mourn'd,
And Heber's banks Eurydice return'd Gay
Dancing sun-beams on the waters play'd,
And verdant alders form'd a quiv'ring shade Pope

The dying gales that pant upon the trees,
The lakes that quiver to the curling breeze. Pope.

2. To shiver; to shudder.

Zelmane would have put to her helping hand, but she was taken with such a quivering, that she thought it more wisdom to lean herself to a tree and look on. Sidney

QUI'VERED. adj. [from quiver.]

1. Furnished with a quiver.

'Tis chastity
She that has that, is clad in compleat steel,

In the races of mankind and families of the world, there remains not to one above another the least pretence to have the right of inheritance Locke.

If they are all debas'd and willing slaves,
The young but breathing to grow grey in bondage,
And the old sinking to ignoble graves,
Of such a race no matter who is king. Murphy.

5. Race of ginger [rayz de gengibre, Span.] A root or sprig of ginger.
6. A particular strength or taste of wine, applied by Temple to any extraordinary natural force of intellect

Of gardens there may be forms wholly irregular, that may have more beauty than of others, but they must owe it to some extraordinary dispositions of nature in the seat, or some great race of fancy or judgment in contrivance. Temple

7. [Ras, Islandick] Contest in running.

To describe races and games
Of tilting furniture Milton

Stand forth ye champions, who the gauntlet wield,
Or you, the swiftest racers of the field,
Stand forth, ye wrestlers who these pastimes grace,
I wield the gauntlet, and I run the race. Pope.

8. Course on the feet.

The flight of many birds is swifter than the race of any beasts. Bacon.

9. Progress; course.

It suddenly fell from an excess of favour, which many examples have taught them, never stopt his race till it came to a headlong overthrow. Sidney

My race of glory run, and race of shame. Milt

The great light of day yet wants to run
Much of his race though steep Milton.

He safe return'd, the race of glory past,
Now to his friends embrace Pope's Odyssey

10. Train; process.

An offensive war is made, which is unjust in the aggressor, the prosecution and race of the war carrieth the defendant to invade the ancient patrimony of the first aggressor, who is now turned defendant, shall he sit down, and not put himself in defence? Bacon

The race of this war fell upon the less of Urbin, which he recobtained. Bacon

RA'CEHORSE. n. s. [race and horse] Horse bred to run for prizes.

The reason Hudibras gives, why those, who can talk on trifles, speak with the greatest fluency, is, that the tongue is like a race-horse, which runs the faster the less weight it carries Addison

RACEMA'TION. n. s. [racemus, Lat.] Cluster, like that of grapes.

A cock will in one day fertilitate the whole racemation or cluster of eggs, which are not excluded in many weeks after Brown.

RA'CER. n. s. [from race] Runner; one that contends in speed.

His stumbling founder'd jade can trot as high
As any other Pegasus can fly,
So the dull eel moves nimbler in the mud,
Than all the swift-finn'd racers of the flood. Dorset.

A poet's form she plac'd before their eyes,
And bad the nimblest racer seize the prize. Pope.

RA'CINESS. n. s. [from racy.] The quality of being racy.

RACK. n. s. [racke, Dut. from racken to stretch]

1. An engine to torture.

Vex not his ghost, O let him pass! he hates him
That would upon the rack of this rough world
Stretch him out longer Shakesp King Lear

Did ever any man upon the rack afflict himself, because he had received a cross answer from his mistress? Taylor

Let them feel the whip, the sword, the fire,
And in the tortures of the rack expire Addison.

2. Torture, extreme pain.

A fit of the stone puts a king to the rack, and makes him as miserable as it does the meanest subject Temple

A cool behaviour sets him on the rack, and is interpreted as an instance of aversion or indifference Addison

3. Any instrument by which extension is performed.

These bows, being somewhat like the long bows in use amongst us, were bent only by a man's immediate strength, without the help of any bender or rack that are used to others Wilkins

4. A distaff; commonly a portable distaff, from which they spin by twirling a ball. It is commonly spoken and written rock.

The sisters turn the wheel,
Empty the woolly rock and fill the reel. Dryden.

5. [Racke, Dut. a track.] The clouds as they are driven by the wind.

That which is now a horse, even with a thought
The rack dislimns, and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water Shakesp. Ant. and Cleop.

The great globe itself,
Yea, all, which it inherit, shall dissolve;
And, like this insubstantial pageant, faded,
Leave not a rack behind. Shakesp. Tempest.

We often see against some storm,
A silence in the heav'ns, the rack stand still,
The bold winds speechless, and the orb below
As hush as death Shakesp. Hamlet.

The winds in the upper region, which move the clouds above, which we call the rack, and are not perceived below, pass without noise Bacon.

As wint'ry winds contending in the sky,
With equal force of lungs their titles try,
They rage, they roar the doubtful rack of heav'n
Stands without motion, and the tide undriv'n
Dryden.

6 [Bracca the occiput, Sax. racca, Islan. hinges or joints] A neck of mutton cut for the table

7. A grate; the grate on which bacon is laid

8. A wooden grate in which hay is placed for cattle.

Their bulls they send to pastures far,
Or hill, or feed them at full racks within May's Virgil.

The best way to feed cattle with it, is to put it in racks, because of the great quantity they tread down Mortimer

He bid the nimble hours
Bring forth the steeds, the nimble hours obey
From their full racks the gen'rous steeds retire
Addison.

9 Arrack; a spirituous liquor. See ARRACK

To RACK. v. n. [from the noun.] To stream as clouds before the wind.

Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun,
Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky Shakesp

To RACK. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To torment by the rack

Unhappy most like tortured me,
Their joints new set to be new rack'd again Cowl

The commons hast thou rack'd, the clergy's bags
Are lank and lean with thy extortions Shakesp

He took possession of his just estate,
Nor rack'd his tenants with increase of rent Dryd.

4. To screw; to force to performance.

They racking and stretching scripture further than by God was meant, are drawn into sundry inconveniencies Hooker

The wisest among the heathens racked their wits, and cast about every way, managing every little argument to the utmost advantage
Tillotson's Sermons.

It was worth the while for the adversary to rack invention, and to call in all the succours of learning and critical skill to assail them, if possible, and to wrest them out of our hands. Waterland

5. To stretch; to extend.

Nor have I money nor commodity,
To raise a present sum,
Try what my credit can in Venice do,
That shall be rack'd even to the uttermost. Shakesp.

6. To defecate; to draw off from the lees

I know not whence this word is derived in this sense; [illegible] to clear, pure, whence our word to rinse: this is perhaps of the same race.

It is common to draw wine or beer from the lees, which we call racking, whereby it will clarify much sooner Bacon.

Some roll their cask about the cellar to mix it with the lees, and, after a few days resettlement, rack it off. Mortimer.

RACK-RENT. n. s. [rack and rent.] Rent raised to the uttermost.

Have poor families been ruined by rack-rents, paid for the lands of the church? Swift's Miscel.

RACK-RENTER. n. s. [rack and renter.] One who pays the uttermost rent.

Though this be a quarter of his yearly income, and the publick tax takes away one hundred, yet this influences not the yearly rent of the land; which the rackrenter or undertenant pays Locke.

RA'CKET. n. s. [Of uncertain derivation, M. Casaubon derives it, after his custom, from ῥαχις, the dash of fluctuation against the shore]

1. An irregular clattering noise.

That the tennis court keeper knows better than I, it is a low ebb of learning with thee, when thou keepest not racket there Shakesp

2 A confused talk. In burlesque language.

Ambition hath removed her lodging, and lives the next door to faction, where they keep such a racket, that the whole parish is disturbed and every night in an uproar Swift

3. [Raquette, Fr] The instrument with which players at tennis strike the ball Whence perhaps all the other senses

When we have match'd our rackets to these balls,
We will in France play a set,
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.
Shakesp

The body into which impression is made, either can yield backward or it cannot if it can yield backward, then the impression made is a motion, as we see a stroke with a racket upon a ball makes it fly from it Digby on the Soul

He talks much of the motives to do and forbear, how they determine a reasonable man, as if he were no more than a tennis-ball, to be tossed to and fro by the rackets of the second causes
Bramhall against Hobbes

RA'CKING. n. s

Racking pace of a horse is the same as an amble, only that it is a swifter time and a shorter tread, and though it does not rid so much ground, yet it is something easier Farrier's Dict

RA'CKOON. n. s.

The racoon is a New England animal, like a badger, having a tail like a fox, being clouthed with a thick and deep furr it sleeps in the day time in a hollow tree, and goes out a-nights, when the moon shines, to feed on the sea side, where it is hunted by dogs Bailey

RA'CY. adj. [perhaps from rayz, Span. a root.] Strong, flavorous, tasting of the soil.

The soil, from which they come, taste, smell, and see Cowley

From his brain that Hellicon distil,
Whose racy liquor did his offspring fill Denham.

The cyder at first is very luscious, but if ground more early, it is more racy Mortimer's Husband.

The hospitable sage, in sign
Of social welcome, mix'd the racy wine,
Late from the mellowing cask restor'd to light,
By ten long years refin'd, and rosy bright. Pope

RAD. the old pret. of read. Spenser.

RAD

Rad, red, and rod, differing only in dialect, signify counsel as Conrad, powerful or skilful in counsel, Ethelred, a noble counsellor, Rodbert, eminent for counsel, Eubulus and Thrasybulus have almost the same sense. Gibson.

RA'DDOCK, or ruddock. n. s. A bird; the red breast.

The raddock would
With charitable bill bring thee all this Shakesp.

RA'DIANCE. } n. s. [radiare, Lat.]
RA'DIANCY. } Sparkling lustre; glitter.

By the sacred radiance of the sun,
By all the operations of the orbs,
Here I disclaim all my paternal care Shakesp.

Whether there be not too high an apprehension above its natural radiancy, is not without just doubt, however it be granted a very splendid gem, and whose sparkles may somewhat resemble the glances of fire. Brown's Vulg Err

The Son
Girt with omnipotence, with radiance crown'd
Of majesty divine Milton

A glory surpassing the sun in its greatest radiancy Burnet

RA'DIANT. adj. [radians, Lat.] Shining; brightly sparkling; emitting rays.

There was a sun of gold radiant upon the top, and before, a small cherub of gold with wings displayed Bacon.

Mark what radiant state she spreads,
In circle round her shining throne,
Shooting her beams like silver threads,
This, this is she alone Milton's Arcades.

Virtue could see to do what [illegible]
By her own radiant light, though [illegible]
Were in the flat sea sunk Milton.

I see the warlike host of heaven,
Radiant in glitt'ring arms and beamy pride,
Go forth to succour truth below Milton.

To RA'DIATE v. n. [radio, Lat.] To emit rays, to shine; to sparkle.

Though wit and parts their possessors could never engage God to send forth his light and his truth, yet now that revelation hath disclosed them, and that he hath been pleased to make them radiate in his word, men may recollect those scattered divine beams, and kindling with them the topicks proper to warm our affections, enflame holy zeal Boyle

Light radiates from luminous bodies directly to our eyes, and thus we see the sun or a flame, or it is reflected from other bodies, and thus we see a man or a picture Locke.

RA'DIATED adj. [radiatus, Lat.] Adorned with rays.

The radiated head of the phœnix gives us the meaning of a passage in Ausonius Addison.

RADIA'TION. n. s. [radiatio, Lat. radiation, Fr.]

1. Beamy lustre; emission of rays.

We have perspective houses, where we make demonstrations of all lights and radiations, and of all colours Bacon.

Should I say I liv'd darker than were true,
Your radiation can all clouds subdue,
But one, 'tis best light to contemplate you
Donne.

2. Emission from a centre every way.

Sound parelleleth in many things with the light and radiation of things visible
Bacon's Nat. Hist.

As when two boars with rankling malice [illegible]
Their gory sides fresh bleeding fiercely [illegible]
I little smart did feel,
And now it rankleth more and more,
And inwardly it festereth sore Spenser's Pastorals.

That fresh bleeding wound
Whilome doth rankle in my riven breast Spenser.

Beware of yonder dog,
Look, when he fawns, he bites, and, when he bites,
His venom tooth will rankle to the death Shakesp

The storm of his own rage the fool confounds,
And envy's rankling sting th' imprudent wounds
Sandys.

Thou shalt feel, enrag'd with inward pains,
The hydra's venom rankling in thy veins. Addis.

I have endur'd the rage of secret grief,
A malady that burns and rankles inward Rowe

RA'NKLY. adv. [from rank.] Coarsely grossly

Whose it was forged, with my rapier's point. Shak.
A soldier of far inferior strength may manage a rapier or firearms so expertly, as to be an overmatch for his adversary. Pope

RAPIER-FISH. n. s.
The rapier-fish, called xiphias, grows sometimes to the length of five yards: the sword, which grows level from the snout of the fish, is here about a yard long, at the base four inches over, two-edged, and pointed exactly like a rapier: he preys on fishes, having first stabbed them with this sword. Grew.

RA'PINE. n. s. [rapina, Lat. rapine, Fr.]
1. The act of plundering.
If the poverty of Scotland might, yet the plenty of England cannot, excuse the envy and rapine of the church's rights. King Charles.
The logick of a conquering sword may silence, but convince it cannot; its efficacy rather breeds aversion and abhorrence of that religion, whose first address is in blood and rapine. Decay of Piety
2. Violence; force.
Her least action overaw'd
His malice, and with rapine sweet bereav'd
His fierceness of its fierce intent. Milton.

RA'PPER. n. s. [from rap.] One who strikes.

RA'PPORT. n. s. [rapport, Fr.] Relation; reference; proportion. A word introduced by the innovator, Temple, but not copied by others.
'Tis obvious what rapport there is between the conceptions and languages in every country, and how great a difference this must make in the excellence of books. Temple

To RAPT. v. n. [This word is used by Chapman for rap improperly, as appears from the participle, which from rapt would be not rapt, but rapted.] To ravish; to put in ecstasy.
You may safe approve,
How strong in instigation to their love
Their rapting tunes are. Chapman's Odyssey

RAPT. n. s. [from rap] A trance; an ecstacy.

RA'PTURE. n. s.

RARE. adj. [rarus, Lat. rare, Fr. in all the senses but the last.]
1. Scarce; uncommon; not frequent.
Live to be [illegible] shall gaze o' th' time;
We'll have [illegible] our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole. Shakesp.
2. Excellent; incomparable; valuable to a degree seldom found.
This jealousy
Is for a precious creature; as she's rare,
Must it be great, and as his person's mighty,
Must it be violent. Shakesp. Winter's Tale
On which was wrought the gods and giants fight,
Rare work, all fill'd with terror and delight. Cowley
Above the rest I judge one beauty rare. Dryden.
3. Thinly scattered.
The cattle in the fields and meadows green,
Those rare and solitary, these in flocks
Pasturing at once, and in broad herds upsprung. Milton.
4. Thin; subtle; not dense.
They are of so tender and weak a nature, as they affect only such a rare and attenuate substance, as the spirit of living creatures Bacon's Nat Hist
So eagerly the fiend
O'erbog or steep, through strait, rough, dense or rare,
With head, hands, wings, or feet, pursues his way Milton
The dense and bright light of the circle will obscure the rare and weak light of these dark colours round about it, and render them almost insensible Newton's Opticks
Bodies are much more rare and porous than is commonly believed: water is nineteen times lighter, and by consequence nineteen times rarer than gold, and gold is so rare, as very readily, and without the least opposition, to transmit the magnetick effluvia, and easily to admit quicksilver into its pores, and to let water pass through it. Newton.
5. Raw: not fully subdued by the fire. This is often pronounced rear.
New-laid eggs, with Baucis' busy care,
Turn'd by a gentle fire, and roasted rare Dryden.

RA'REESHOW. n. s. [This word is formed in imitation of the foreign way of pronouncing rare show.] A show carried in a box.
The fashions of the town affect us just like a rareeshow, we have the curiosity to peep at them, and nothing more Pope
Of rareeshows he sung, and Punch's feats Gay

RAREFA'CTION. n. s. [rarefaction, Fr from rarefy] Extension of the parts of a body, that makes it take up more room than it did before; contrary to condensation.
The water within being rarefied, and by rarefaction resolved into wind, will force up the smoak Wotton's Architecture
When exhalations, shut up in the caverns of the earth by rarefaction or compression, come to be straitened, they strive every way to set themselves at liberty Burnet.

RA'REFIABLE. adj. [from rarefy.] Admitting rarefaction.

To RA'REFY. v. a. [rarefier, Fr. rarus and facio, Lat. rarify were more proper.] To make thin: contrary to condense.
To the hot equator crouding fast,
Where highly rarefied the yielding air
Admits their steam. Thomson.

To RA'REFY. v. n. To become thin.
Earth rarefies to dew, expanded more,
The subtil dew in air begins to soar. Dryden.

RA'RELY. adv. [from rare]
1. Seldom; not often, not frequently.
His temperance in sleep resembled that of his meats, midnight being the usual time of his going to rest, and four or five, and very rarely six, the hour of his rising Fell.
Rarely they rise by virtue's aid, who lie
Plung'd in the depth of helpless poverty. Dryden.
Vanessa in her bloom,
Advanc'd like Atalanta's star,
But rarely seen, and seen from far. Swift.
2. Finely; nicely; accurately. This is now seldom used but ironically.
How rarely does it meet with this time's guise,
When man was will'd to love his enemies Shakesp

RA'RENESS. n. s. [from rare]
1. Uncommonness; state of happening seldom; infrequency.
Tickling is most in the soles, arm-holes and sides the cause is the thinness of the skin, joined with the rareness of being touched there, for tickling is a light motion of the spirits, which the thinness of the skin, the suddenness and rareness of touch, doth further Bacon
For the rareness and rare effect of that petition I'll insert it as presented Clarendon
Of my heart I now a present make,
Accept it as when early fruit we send,
And let the rareness the small gift commend Dryd
2. Value arising from scarcity.
Roses set in a pool, supported with some stay, is matter of rareness and pleasure, though of small use. Bacon
To worthiest things,
Virtue, art, beauty, fortune, now I see
Rareness or use, not nature, value brings. Donne.
3. Thinness; tenuity.
4 Distance from each other; thinness.

RA'RITY. n. s. [rarité, Fr. raritas, Lat.]
1. Uncommonness, infrequency.
Far from being fond of any flower for its rarity, if I meet with any in a field which pleases me, I give it a place in my garden Spectator.
2. A thing valued for its scarcity.
Sorrow would be a rarity most belov'd,
If all could so become it Shakesp. King Lear.
It would be a rarity worth the seeing, could any one shew us such a thing as a perfectly reconciled enemy South
I saw three rarities of different kinds, which pleased me more than any other shows of the place. Addison.
3. Thinness; subtlety: the contrary to density.
Bodies, under the same outward bulk, have a greater thinness and expansion, or thickness and solidity, which terms, in English, do not signify fully those differences of quantity, therefore I will do it under the names of rarity and density Digby
This I do, not to draw any argument against them from the universal rest or accurately equal diffusion of matter, but only that I may better demonstrate the great rarity and tenuity of their imaginary chaos. Bentley's Sermons.

RA'SCAL. n. s [rascal, Sax. a lean beast.]
1. A mean fellow; a scoundrel; a sorry wretch.
For the rascal commons, lest he cared. Spenser.

Can any kind of ratiocination allow Christ all the marks of the Messiah, and yet deny him to be the Messiah? South.

Such an inscription would be self-evident without any ratiocination or study, and could not fail constantly to exert its energy in their minds Bentl

RATIO'CINATIVE. adj. [from ratiocinate.] Argumentative; advancing by process of discourse.

Some consecutions are so intimately and evidently connexed to, or found in the premises, that the conclusion is attained quasi per saltum, and without any thing of ratiocinative process, even as the eye sees his object immediately, and without any previous discourse Hale's Orig of Mankind

RA'TIONAL. adj. [rationalis, Lat.]

1. Having the power of reasoning.

God decreed to create man after his own image, a free and rational agent. Hammond.

As that which hath a fitness to promote the welfare of man, considered as a sensitive being, is stiled natural good, so that which hath a fitness to promote the welfare of man, as a rational, voluntary and free agent, is stiled moral good, and the contrary to it moral evil. Wilkins.

If it is our glory and happiness to have a rational nature, that is endued with wisdom and reason, that is capable of imitating the divine nature, then it must be our glory and happiness to improve our reason and wisdom, to act up to the excellency of our rational nature, and to imitate God in all our actions, to the utmost of our power. Law

2. Agreeable to reason.

What higher in her society thou find'st
Attractive, humane, rational, love still. Milton.

When the conclusion is deduced from the unerring dictates of our faculties, we say the inference is rational. Glanville's Scepsis.

In your arguments be rational, offer them in as moving a manner as the nature of the subject will admit, but beware of letting the pathetick part swallow up the rational. Swift.

3. Wise; judicious: as, a rational man.

RATIONA'LE. n. s. [from ratio, Lat.] A detail with reasons. as, Dr. Sparrow's Rationale of the Common Prayer.

Already Cæsar
Has ravag'd more than half the globe, and sees
Mankind grown thin by his destructive sword Addison.

His blasts obey, and quit the howling hill,
The shatter'd forest, and the ravag'd vale Thom.

RA'VAGE n s. [ravage, Fr. from the verb.] Spoil; ruin, waste.

Some cruel pleasure will from thence arise,
To view the mighty ravage of your eyes Dryden

Would one think 'twere possible for love
To make such ravage in a noble soul? Addison

Those savages were not then, what civilized mankind is now, but without mutual society, without arms of offence, without houses or fortifications, an obvious and exposed prey to the ravage of devouring beasts Bentley

RA'VAGER. n. s. [from ravage] Plunderer; spoiler.

When that mighty empire was overthrown by the northern people, vast sums of money were buried to escape the plundering of the conquerors, and what remained was carried off by those ravagers. Swift

RAU'CITY. n. s. [raucus, Lat.] Hoarseness; loud rough noise.

Inequality not stayed upon, but passing, is rather an increase of sweetness; as in the purling of a wreathed string, and in the raucity of a trumpet. Bacon's Nat Hist

To RAVE. v. n. [reven, Dut. rêver, Fr.]

1. To be delirious; to talk irrationally.

Men who thus rave, we may conclude their brains are turned, and one may as well read lectures at Bedlam as treat with such. Government of the Tongue.

It soon infecteth the whole member, and is accompanied with watching and raving Wiseman.

Her grief has wrought her into frenzy!
The images her troubled fancy forms
Are incoherent, wild, her words disjointed
Sometimes she raves for musick, light, and air,
Nor air, nor light, nor musick calm her pains Smith.

2. To burst out into furious exclamations as if mad

Shall these wild distempers of thy mind,
This tempest of thy tongue, thus rave, and find
No opposition? Sandy's Paraphrase on Job.

The raven himself is hoarse
That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements Shakesp Macbeth.

Come thou day in night,
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night,
Whiter than snow upon a raven's back Shakesp.

I have seen a perfectly white raven, as to bill as well as feathers. Boyle on Colours.

He made the greedy ravens to be Elias' caterers, and bring him food King Charles.

On sev'ral parts a sev'ral praise bestows,
The ruby lips, and well-proportion'd nose,
The snowy skin, the raven glossy hair,
The dimpl'd cheek Dryden's Cymon and Iphigenia,

The raven once in snowy plumes was dress'd,
White as the whitest dove's unsullied breast,
His tongue, his prating tongue had chang'd him quite
To sooty blackness from the purest white Addison.

Hence Gildon rails, that raven of the pit,
Who thrives upon the carcasses of wit. Young.

To RA'VEN. v. a. [hæfnan, Sax. to rob.] To devour with great eagerness and rapacity.

Thine own life's means Shakesp.

Our natures do pursue,
Like rats that raven down their proper bane,
A thirsty evil, and when we drink we die Shak

The cloyed will
That satiate, yet unsatisfied desire, that tub
Both fill'd and running, ravening first the lamb,
Longs after for the garbage Shakesp Cymbeline

There is a conspiracy of the prophets, like a roaring lion ravening the prey. Ezekiel xxii 25

To RA'VEN. v. n. To prey with rapacity

Benjamin shall raven as a wolf, in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil. Genesis

They gaped upon me with their mouths, as a ravening and a roaring lion. Psalm xxii 13.

The more they fed, they raven'd still for more,
They drain'd from Dan, and left Beersheba poor,
But when some lay preferment fell by chance,
The Gourmands made it their inheritance Dryden

Convulsions rack man's nerves and cares his breast,
His flying life is chas'd by rav'ning pains
Through all his doubles in the winding veins. Blackmore,

RA'VENOUS. adj. [from raven.] Furiously voracious: hungry to rage.

Thy desires
Are wolfish, bloody, starv'd, and ravenous. Shak.

As when a flock
Of ravenous fowl, through many a league remote,
Against the day of battle, to a field
Where armies lie encamp'd come flying, lur'd
With scent of living carcasses. Milt. Par Lost

What! the kind Ismena,
That nurs'd me, watch'd my sickness! oh she watch'd me,
As rav'nous vultures watch the dying lion. Smith.

RA'VENOUSLY. adv. [from ravenous.] With raging voracity.

RA'VENOUSNESS. n. s. [from ravenous] Rage for prey; furious voracity.

And Marian's nose looks red and raw Shakesp

If there be quick raw flesh in the rising, it is an old leprosy Leviticus, xiii 10

3. Sore.

This her knight was feeble and too faint,
And all his sinews waxen weak and raw
Through long imprisonment Spenser

4 Immature, unripe; not concocted.

5. Unseasoned, unripe in skill.

Some people, very raw and ignorant, are very unworthily and unfitly nominated to places, when men of desert are held back and unpreferred
Raleigh's Essays

People, while young and raw, and soft-natured, are apt to think it an easy thing to gain love, and reckon their own friendship a sure price of another man's; but when experience shall have once opened their eyes, they will find that a friend is the gift of God South.

Sails were spread to every wind that blew,
Raw were the sailors, and the depths were new.
Dryden

Well I knew
What perils youthful ardour would pursue,
Young as thou wert in dangers, raw to war
Dryden

RA'ZURE. n. s. [rasure, Fr. rasura, Lat.] Act of erasing.

Oh! your desert speaks loud,
It well deserves with characters of brass
A forted residence, 'gainst the tooth of time
And razure of oblivion Shakesp

RE Is an inseparable particle used by the Latins, and from them borrowed by us to denote iteration or backward action as, return, to come back; to revive, to live again; repercussion, the act of driving back reciprocation, as to recriminate. It is put almost arbitrarily before verbs and verbal nouns, so that many words so compounded will perhaps be found, which it was not necessary to insert. It sometimes adds little to the simple meaning of the word, as in rejoice.

REACCE'SS. n. s. [re and access.] Visit renewed.

Let pass the quailing and withering of all things by the recess, and their reviving by the reaccess of the sun Hakewill.

To* REANNE'X. v. a. [re and annex.] To annex again.

King Charles was not a little inflamed with an ambition to repurchase and reannex that duchy Bacon's Henry VII.

To* REAP. v. a. [hepan, Sax.]

1. To cut corn at harvest.

From Ireland come I with my strength,
And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd Shakesp

When ye reap the harvest, thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field Leviticus xix 9

The hire of the labourers, which have reaped down your fields, is kept back by fraud. James.

2. To gather; to obtain. It is once used by Shakespeare in an ill sense.

They that love the religion which they profess, may have failed in choice, but yet they are sure to reap what benefit the same is able to afford Hooker

What sudden anger's this? how have I reap'd it? Shakesp

This is a thing,
Which you might from relation likewise reap,
Being much spoke of Shakesp. Cymbeline

Our sins being ripe, there was no preventing of God's justice from reaping that glory in our calamities, which we robbed him off in our prosperity King Charles.

To* REAP. v. n. To harvest.

They that sow in tears, shall reap in joy Psalms.

REA'PER n. s. [from reap.] One that cuts corn at harvest.

From hungry reapers they their sheaves withhold Sandys.

Here Ceres' gifts in waving prospect stand,
And nodding tempt the joyful reaper's hand Pope

A thousand forms he wears,
And first a reaper from the field appears,
Sweating he walks, while loads of golden grain
O'ercharge the shoulders of the seeming swain Pope

REA'PINGHOOK n. s [reaping and hook] A hook used to cut corn in harvest.

Some are brib'd to vow it looks
Most plainly done by thieves with reapinghooks Dryden

REAR. n. s. [arriere, Fr]

1. The hinder troop of an army, or the hinder line of a fleet.

The rear admiral, an arch pirate, was afterwards slain with a great shot Knolles

Argive chiefs
Fled from his well-known face, with wonted fear,
As when his thund'ring sword and pointed spear
Drove headlong to their ships, and glean'd the rear Dryden

2. The last class; the last in order.

Coins I place in the rear, because made up of both the other Peacham.

Snowy headed winter leads,
Yellow autumn brings the rear Waller.

REAR. adj [hnepe, Sax.]

1. Raw; half roasted, half sodden.

Some war with rearmice for their leathern wings
To make my small elves coats Shakesp

Of flying fishes the wings are not feathers, but a thin kind of skin, like the wings of a bat or rearmouse Abbot

To* REASCE'ND. v n. [re and ascend.] To climb again.

When as the day the heaven doth adorn,
I wish that night the noyous day would end,
And when as night hath us of light forlorn,
I wish that day would shortly reascend. Spenser

Taught by the heav'nly muse to venture down
The dark descent, and up to reascend. Milton.

These puissant legions, whose exile
Hath empty'd heav'n, shall fail to reascend,
Self-rais'd, and repossess their native seat Milton.

To* REASCE'ND. v. a. To mount again.

When the god his fury had allay'd,
He mounts aloft, and reascends the skies Addison.

REA'SON. n. s. [raison, Fr. ratio, Lat.]

1. The power by which man deduces one proposition from another, or proceeds from premises to consequences; the rational faculty; discursive power.

Reason is the director of man's will, discovering in action what is good, for the laws of well-doing are the dictates of right reason. Hooker

Though brutish that contest and foul,
When reason hath to deal with force, yet so
Most reason is that reason overcome Milton.

I appeal to the common judgment of mankind, whether the humane nature be not so framed, as to acquiesce in such a moral certainty, as the nature of things is capable of, and if it were otherwise, whether that reason which belongs to us, would not prove a burden and a torment to us, rather than a privilege, by keeping us in a continual suspense, and thereby rendering our conditions perpetually restless and unquiet. Wilkins.

Dim, as the borrow'd beams of moon and stars
To lonely, weary, wand'ring travellers,
Is reason to the soul and as on high,
Those rowling fires discover but the sky,
Not light us here; so reason's glimmering ray
Was lent, not to assure our doubtful way,
But guide us upward to a better day Dryden.

It would be well, if people would not lay so much weight on their own reason in matters of religion, as to think every thing impossible and absurd, which they cannot conceive how often do we contradict the right rules of reason in the whole course of our lives? reason itself is true and just, but the reason of every particular man is weak and wavering, perpetually swayed and turned by his interests, his passions and his vices Swift

2. Cause; ground or principle.

What the apostles deemed rational and probable means to that end, there is no reason or probability to think should ever in any produce this effect Hammond

Virtue and vice are not arbitrary things, but there is a natural and eternal reason for that goodness and virtue, and against vice and wickedness Tillotson.

3. Cause efficient.

Spain is thin sown of people, partly by reason of the sterility of the soil, and partly their natives are exhausted by so many employments in such vast territories as they possess Bacon

Such a benefit, as by the antecedent will of Christ is intended to all men living, though all men, by reason of their own demerits, do not actually receive the fruit of it White

The vanes of the motion of the balance in a wheel watch, is by the motion of the next wheel Hale

By reason of the sickness of a reverend prelate, I have been over-ruled to approach this place Spratt

I have not observed equality of numbers in my verse, partly by reason of my haste, but more especially because I would not have my sense a slave to syllables. Dryden.

4. Final cause.

Reason, in the English language, sometimes is taken for true and clear principles, sometimes for clear and fair deductions, sometimes for the cause, particularly the final cause. Locke

5. Argument; ground of persuasion; motive.

I mask the business from the common eye
For sundry weighty reasons. Shakesp. Macbeth.

If it be natural, ought we not rather to conclude, that there is some ground and reason for these fears, and that nature hath not planted them in us to no purpose? Tillotson.

If we commemorate any mystery of our redemption, or article of our faith, we ought to confirm our belief of it, by considering all those reasons upon which it is built, that we may be able to give a good account of the hope that is in us Nelson

6. Ratiocination; discursive act.

When she rates things, and moves from ground to ground,
The name of reason she obtains by this,
But when by reason she the truth hath found,
And standeth fixt, she understanding is. Davies

7. Clearness of faculties.

Lovers and madmen have their seething brains,
Such shaping fantasies that apprehend
More than cool reason ever comprehends Shakesp.

When valour preys on reason,
It eats the sword it fights with. Shakesp.

8. Right; justice.

I was promis'd on a time,
To have reason for my rhyme.
From that time unto this season,
I receiv'd nor rhyme nor reason. Spenser.

Are you in earnest?
—Ay, and resolv'd withal
To do myself this reason and this right. Shakesp

The papists ought in reason to allow them all the excuses they make use of for themselves, such as an invincible ignorance, oral tradition, and authority Stillingfleet.

Let it drink deep in thy most vital part,
Strike home, and do me reason in thy heart. Dryden.

9. Reasonable claim; just practice.

God brings good out of evil, and therefore it were but reason we should trust God to govern his own world, and wait till the change cometh, or the reason be discovered. Taylor.

Conscience, not acting by law, is a boundless presumptuous thing, and, for any one by virtue thereof, to challenge himself a privilege of doing what he will, and of being unaccountable, is in all reason too much, either for man or angel South

A severe reflection Montaigne has made on princes, that we ought not in reason to have any expectations of favour from them Dryden

We have as great assurance that there is a God, as the nature of the thing to be proved is capable of, and as we could in reason expect to have. Tillotson's Preface

When any thing is proved by as good arguments as a thing of that kind is capable of, we ought not in reason to doubt of its existence Tillotson

10. Rationale; just account.

This reason did the ancient fathers render, why the church was called Catholick Pearson.

To render a reason of an effect or phenomenon, is to deduce it from something else more known than itself Boyle

11. Moderation; moderate demands.

The most probable way of bringing France to reason, would be by the making an attempt upon the Spanish West Indies, and by that means to cut off all communication with this great source of riches. Addison

To REA'SON v. n. [raisonner, Fr]

1. To argue rationally; to deduce consequences justly from premises.

No man, in the strength of the first grace, can merit the second, for reason they do not, who think so, unless a beggar, by receiving one alms, can merit another South

Ideas, as ranked under names, are those, that for the most part men reason of within themselves, and always those which they commune about with others Locke

Every man's reasoning and knowledge is only about the ideas existing in his own mind, and our knowledge and reasoning about other things is only as they correspond with those our particular ideas Locke

Love is not to be reason'd down, or lost
In high ambition. Addison

In the lonely grove,
'Twas there just and good he reason'd strong,
Clear'd some great truth, or rais'd some serious song Tickel.

2. To debate; to discourse; to talk, to take or give an account. Not in use

Reason with the fellow,
Before you punish him, where he heard this Shakesp

I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday,
Who told me in the narrow seas,
There miscarried a vessel of our country Shakesp.

Stand still, that I may reason with you of all the righteous acts of the Lord 1 Samuel, xii 7.

3. To raise disquisitions; to make enquiries.

Jesus, perceiving their thoughts, said, What reason ye in your hearts? Luke v. 22.

They reason'd high
Of providence, foreknowledge, will, and fate. Milton.

Down reason then, at least vain reasoning down. Milton.

To REA'SON. v. a. To examine rationally. This is a French mode of speech.

When they are clearly discovered, well digested, and well reasoned in every part, there is beauty in such a theory. Burnet

REA'SONABLE. adj. [raison, Fr.]

1. Having the faculty of reason; endued with reason.

She perceived her only son lay hart, and that his heart was so deadly, as that already his life had lost use of the reasonable and almost sensible part. Sidney.

2. Acting, speaking, or thinking rationally.

The parliament was dissolved, and gentlemen furnished with such forces, as were held sufficient to hold in bridle either the malice or rage of reasonable people. Hayward.

3. Just; rational; agreeable to reason.

By indubitable certainty, I mean that which doth not admit of any reasonable cause of doubting, which is the only certainty of which most things are capable. Wilkins.

A law may be reasonable in itself, although a man does not allow it, or does not know the reason of the law-givers Swift.

4. Not immoderate.

Let all things be thought upon,
That may with reasonable swiftness add
More feathers to our wings. Shakesp. Henry V.

5 Tolerable; being in mediocrity.

I could with reasonable good manner receive the salutation of her and of the princess Pamela, deeming them yet no further reverence than one princess oweth to another Sidney.

A good way distant from the nigra rupes, there are four several lands of reasonable quantity Abbot

Notwithstanding these defects, the English colonies maintained themselves in a reasonable good estate, as long as they retained their own ancient laws Davies on Ireland.

REA'SONABLENESS. n. s. [from reasonable.]

1. The faculty of reason.

2. Agreeableness to reason.

They thought the work would be better done, if those, who had satisfied themselves with the reasonableness of what they wish, would undertake the converting and disposing of other men. Clarendon.

He that rightly understands the reasonableness and excellency of charity, will know, that it can never be excusable to waste any of our money in pride and folly Law

3. Compliance with reason

The passive reason, which is more properly reasonableness, is that order and congruity which is impressed upon the thing thus wrought, as in a watch, the whole frame and contexture of it carries a reasonableness in it, the passive impression of the reason or intellectual idea that was in the artist. Hale

4 Moderation.

REA'SONABLY. adv. [from reasonable.]

1. Agreeably to reason.

Chaucer makes Arcite violent in his love, and unjust in the pursuit of it, yet when he came to die, he made him think more reasonably Dryden

The church has formerly had eminent saints in that sex, and it may reasonably be thought, that it is purely owing to their poor and vain education, that this honour of their sex is for the most part confined to former ages Law.

2. Moderately; in a degree reaching to mediocrity.

Some man reasonably studied in the law, should be persuaded to go thither as chancellor. Bacon.

If we can by industry make our deaf and dumb persons reasonably perfect in the language and pronunciation, he may be also capable of the same privilege of understanding by the eye what is spoken Holder's Elements of Speech.

REA'SONER. n. s. [raisonneur, Fr. from reason.] One who reasons; an arguer.

Due reverence pay
To learned Epicurus; see the way
By which this reas'ner of so high renown
Moves through th' ecliptick road the rolling sun
Blackmore

The terms are loose and undefined, and what less becomes a fair reasoner, he puts wrong and invidious names to every thing to colour a false way of arguing. Addison.

Those reasoners, who employ so much of their zeal for the upholding the balance of power in Christendom, by their practices are endeavouring to destroy it at home. Swift.

REA'SONING. n. s. [from reason.] Argument.

Those who would make use of solid arguments and strong reasonings to a reader of so delicate a turn, would be like that foolish people, who worshipped a fly, and sacrificed an ox to it. Addison.

Your reasonings therefore on this head, amount only to what the schools call ignoratio elenchi; proving before the question, on talking wide of the purpose. Watchland.

REA'SONLESS. adj. [from reason.] Void of reason.

This profane, absurd and reasonless Shakesp.
Is it
Her true perfection, or my false transgression,
That makes me reasonless to reason thus? Shakesp.

That they wholly direct the reasonless mind, I am resolved, for all those which were created mortal, as birds and beasts, are left to their natural appetites. Raleigh's History of the World.

These reasons in love's law have past for good,
Though fond and reasonless to some Milton.

To* REASSE'MBLE. v. a. [re and assemble.] To collect anew.

There reassembling our afflicted pow'rs,
Consult how to offend our enemy Milton.

To* REASSE'RT. v. a. [re and assert.] To assert anew; to maintain after suspension or cessation.

His steps I followed, his doctrine I reasserted.
Atterbury.

Young Orestes grown
To manly years should reassert the throne. Pope

To* REASSU'ME. v. a. [reassumo, Lat. re and assume.] To resume; to take again.

To him the Son return'd,
Into his blissful bosom reassum'd,
In glory as of old. Milton.

Nor only on the Trojans fell this doom,
Their hearts at last the vanquish'd reassume.Denh.
For this he reassumes the nod,
While Semele commands the god. Prior.

After Henry VIII. had reassumed the supremacy, a statute was made, by which all doctors of the civil law might be made chancellors. Ayliffe.

To* REASSU'RE. v. a. [reassurer, Fr.] To free from fear; to restore from terrour.

They rose with fear,
Till dauntless Pallas reassur'd the rest. Dryden.

REATE. n. s. A kind of long small grass that grows in water, and complicates itself together.

Let them lie dry six months to kill the waterweeds, as water-lillies, candocks, reate, and bulrushes Walton.

To* REAVE. v. a. pret. reft. [ræpian, Saxon, whence to bereave.]

1. To take away by stealth or violence. An obsolete word.

Dismounting from his lofty steed,
He to him leapt, in mind to reave his life. Spenser.
Some make his measby bed, but reave his rest.
Carew

But these men knowing, having heard the voyce
Of God, by some meanes, that sad death hath reft
The ruler heare; will never suffer theft
Their unjust wooing of his wife. Chapman.
Who can be bould by any salomn vow,
To do a murd'rous deed, to rob a man,
To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
To reave the orphan of his patrimony,
And have no other reason for his wrong,
But that he was bound by a solemn oath,
Shakesp.

2. It was used as well in a good as bad sense.

They sought my troubled sense how to deceave
With talk, that might unquiet fancies reave.
Spenser

Each succeeding time addeth or reaveth goods and evils, according to the occasions itself produceth. Carew

To* REBA'PTIZE. v. a. [rebaptiser, Fr. re and baptize.] To baptize again.

Understanding that the rites of the church were observed, he approved of their baptism, and would not suffer them to be rebaptized
Ayliffe's Parergon

REBAPTIZA'TION. n. s. [rebaptisation, Fr. from rebaptize.] Renewal of baptism.

In maintenance of rebaptisation, their arguments are built upon this, that hereticks are not any part of the church of Christ. Hooker

To* REBA'TE. v. n. [rebattre, Fr.] To blunt; to beat to obtuseness; to deprive of keenness.

He doth rebate and blunt his natural edge
With profits of the mind, study and fast Shakesp.
The rey goat, the crab which square the scales,
With those of aries trine consent to hate
The scales of libra, and her rays rebate. Creech.
He modifies his first severe decree,
The keener edge of battle to rebate,
The troops for honour fighting, not for hate
Dryden

My flagging soul flies under her own pitch,
My senses too are dull and stupify'd,
Their edge rebated Dryden's Don Sebastian
Their innocence unfeign'd long joys afford
To the honest nuptial bed, and, in the wane
Of life, rebate the miseries of age. Philips

RE'BECK. n. s. [rebec, Fr. ribecca, Ital.] A three stringed fiddle.

When the merry bells ring round,
And the jocund rebecks sound,
To many a youth and many a maid,
Dancing in the checker'd shade. Milton

RE'BEL. n. s. [rebelle, Fr. rebellis, Lat.] One who opposes lawful authority by violence.

The merciless Macdonel
Worthy to be a rebel, for to that
The multiplying villanies of nature
Do swarm upon him Shakesp. Macbeth.
The rebels there are up,
And put the Englishmen unto the sword. Shakesp.
Shall man from nature's sanction stray,
A rebel to her rightful sway? Fenton.

To* REBE'L. v. n. [rebello, Lat.] To rise in violent opposition against lawful authority.

Boys, immature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to the present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment Shakesp.
If they perceive dissention in our looks,
How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd
To wilful disobedience, and rebel? Shakesp.
Such smiling rogues as these soothe every passion,
That in the nature of their lords rebels,
Bring oil to fire. Shakesp. King Lear.
There was a time, when all the body's members
Rebell'd against the belly. Shakesp. Coriolanus.
Arm'd with thy might, rid heav'n of these rebell'd. Milton.
How cou'd my hand rebel against my heart?
How cou'd your heart rebel against your reason?
Dryden.

Part of the angels rebelled against God, and by that means lost their happy state. Locke

REBE'LLER. n. s. [from rebel.] One that rebels. Diet.

REBE'LLION. n. s. [rebellion, Fr. rebellio, Lat. from rebel.] Insurrection against lawful authority.

He was victorious in rebellions and seditions of people Bacon.

Adam's sin, or the curse upon it, did not deprive him of rule, but left the creatures to a rebellion or reluctation Bacon.

Of their names in heav'nly records now
Is no memorial, blotted out and ras'd
By their rebellion from the books of life. Milton.

REBE'LLIOUS. adj. [from rebel.] Opponent to lawful authority.

From the day that thou didst depart out of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the Lord. Deut ix. 7.

This our son is stubborn and rebellious, he will not obey our voice Deuteronomy, xxi. 20.

Bent he seems
On desperate revenge, which shall redound
Upon his own rebellious head. Milton.

REBE'LLIOUSLY. adv. [from rebellious.] In opposition to lawful authority.

Where one showed him where a nobleman, that had rebelliously born arms against him, lay very honourably intombed, and advised the king to deface the monument, he said, no, no, but I would all the rest of mine enemies were as honourably intombed Camden

REBE'LLIOUSNESS. n. s. [from rebellious.] The quality of being rebellious.

To* REBE'LLOW. v. n. [re and bellow. To bellow in return; to echo back a loud noise.

To* REBOU'ND. v. n. [rebondir, Fr. re and bound] To spring back; to be reverberated; to fly back in consequence of motion impressed and resisted by a greater power.

Whether it were a roaring voice of most savage wild beasts, or a rebounding echo from the hollow mountains. Wisdom xvii.

It with rebounding surge the bars assail'd Milton.

Life and death are in the power of the tongue, and that not only directly with regard to the good or ill we may do to others, but reflexively with regard to what may rebound to ourselves.
Government of the Tongue.

Bodies which are absolutely hard, or so soft as to be void of elasticity, will not rebound from one another impenetrability makes them only stop.
Newton's Opticks.

She bounding from the shelfy shore,

To* REBOU'ND. v. a.

1. To reverberate; to beat back.

All our invectives at their supposed errors, fall back with a rebounded force upon our own real ones. Decay of Piety.

Silenus sung, the vales his voice rebound,
And carry to the skies the rebounded sound. Dryden.

2. Prior has used it improperly.

Flow'rs, by the soft South West
Open'd, and gather'd by religious hands,
Rebound their sweets from th' odoriferous pavement. Prior.

REBOU'ND. n. s. [from the verb.] The act of flying back in consequence of resistion resisted; reasilition.

I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that shoots
My very heart. Shakesp Antony and Cleopatra.

If you strike a ball sidelong, not full upon the surface, the rebound will be as much the contrary way, whether there be any such reasilience in echoes may be tried Bacon.

The weapon with unerring fury flew,
At his left shoulder aim'd nor entrance found,
But back, as from a rock, with swift rebound
Harmless return'd Dryden

REBU'FF. n. s. [rebuffade, Fr. rebuffo, Ital.] Repercussion; quick and sudden resistance.

By ill chance
The strong rebuff of some tumultuous cloud,
Instinct with fire and nitre, hurried him
As many miles aloft. Milton's Paradise Lost

The refiners of iron observe, that that iron stone is hardest to melt, which is fullest of metal, and that easiest which hath most dross. Bacon.

2. Improver in elegance.

As they have been the great refiners of our language, so it hath been my chief ambition to imitate them. Swift.

3. Inventor of superfluous subtilties.

No men see less of the truth of things, than these great refiners upon incidents, who are so wonderfully subtle, and over-wise in their conceptions. Addison's Spectator.

Some refiners pretend to argue for the usefulness of parties upon such a government as ours Swift.

To REFI'T. v. a. [refait, Fr re and fit.] To repair, to restore after damage

He will not allow that there are any such signs of art in the make of the present globe, or that there was so great care taken in the refitting of it up again at the deluge Woodward

Permit our ships a shelter on your shoars,
Refitted from your woods with planks and oars. Dryden.

To REFLE'CT. v. a. [reflechir, Fr reflecto, Lat.] To throw back.

We, his gather'd beams
Reflected, may with matter sere foment Milton.

Bodies close together reflect their own colour. Dryden.

To REFLE'CT. v. n.

1. To throw back light.

In dead men's sculls, and in those holes,
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept,
As 'twere in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems. Shakesp.

2. To bend back.

Inanimate matter moves always in a straight line, and never reflects in an angle, nor bends in a circle, which is a continual reflection, unless either by some external impulse, or by an intrinsick principle of gravity Bentley's Sermons.

3. To throw back the thoughts upon the past or on themselves.

The imagination casts thoughts in our way, and forces the understanding to reflect upon them Duppa.

In every action reflect upon the end, and in your undertaking it, consider why you do it Taylor

Who saith, who could such ill events expect?
With shame on his own counsels doth reflect Denh

When men are grown up, and reflect on their own minds, they cannot find any thing more ancient there, than those opinions which were taught them before their memory began to keep a register of their actions Locke

It is hard, that any part of my land should be settled upon one who has used me so ill, and yet I could not see a sprig of any bough of this whole walk of trees, but I should reflect upon her and her severity Addison's Spectator

Let the king dismiss his woes,
Reflecting on her fair renown,
And take the cypress from his brows,
To put his wonted laurels on Prior.

4. To consider attentively.

Into myself my reason's eye I turn'd,
And as I much reflected, much I mourn'd Prior

5. To throw reproach or censure.

Neither do I reflect in the least upon the memory of his late majesty, whom I entirely acquit of any imputation. Swift.

6. To bring reproach.

Errors of wives reflect on husbands still. Dryden.

REFLE'CTENT. adj. [reflectens, Lat.] Bending back; flying back.

The ray descendent, and the ray reflectent, flying with so great a speed, that the air between them cannot take a formal play any way, before the beams of the light be on both sides of it, it follows, that, according to the nature of humid things, it must first only swell. Digby on the Soul.

REFLE'CTION. n s. [from reflect: thence I think reflexion less proper: reflexion, Fr. reflexus, Lat.]

1. The act of throwing back.

The eye sees not itself,
But by reflection from other things Shakesp.

If the sun's light consisted but of one sort of rays, there would be but one colour, and it would be impossible to produce any new by reflections or refractions Cheyne.

2. The act of bending back.

Inanimate matter moves always in a straight line, nor ever reflects in an angle or circle, which is a continual reflection, unless by some external impulse. Bentley's Sermons.

3. That which is reflected.

She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her. Shakesp.

As the sun in water we can bear,
Yet not the sun, but his reflection there,
So let us view her here in what she was,
And take her image in this wat'ry glass. Dryden.

4. Thought thrown back upon the past, or the absent, on itself.

The three first parts I dedicate to my old friends, to take off those melancholy reflections, which the sense of age, infirmity, and death may give them Denham.

This dreadful image so possess'd her mind,
She ceas'd all farther hope, and now began
To make reflection on the unhappy man. Dryden.

Job's reflections on his once flourishing estate, did at the same time afflict and encourage him Atterbury.

What wounding reproaches of soul must he feel from the reflections on his own ingratitude. Rogers.

5. The action of the mind upon itself.

Reflection is the perception of the operations of our own minds within us, as it is employed about the ideas it has got. Locke.

6. Attentive consideration.

This delight grows and improves under thought and reflection; and while it exercises, does also endear itself to the mind, at the same time employing and inflaming the meditations South's Sermons.

7. Censure.

He dy'd, and oh! may no reflection shed
Its puis'nous venom on the royal dead Prior

REFLE'CTIVE. adj. [from reflect.]

1. Throwing back images.

When the weary king gave place to night,
His beams he to his royal brother lent,
And so shone still in his reflective light. Dryden.

In the reflective stream the sighing bride,
Viewing her charms impair'd, abash'd shall hide
Her pensive head. Prior.

2. Considering things past; considering the operations of the mind.

Forc'd by reflective reason I confess
That human science is uncertain guess. Prior

REFLE'CTOR. n. s. [from reflect.] Considerer.

There is scarce any thing that nature has made, or that men do suffer, whence the devout reflector cannot take an occasion of an aspiring meditation Boyle on Colours

REFLE'X. adj. [reflexus, Lat.] Directed backward.

The motions of my mind are as obvious to the reflex act of the soul, or the turning of the intellectual eye inward upon its own actions, as the passions of my sense are obvious to my sense, I see the object, and I perceive that I see it. Hale

The order and beauty of the inanimate parts of the world, the discernible ends of them do evince by a reflex argument, that it is the workmanship, not of blind mechanism or blinder chance, but of an intelligent and benign agent. Bentley.

REFLE'X. n. s. [reflexus, Lat.] Reflection.

There was no other way for angels to sin, but by reflex of their understandings upon themselves Hooker

I'll say yon gray is not the morning's eye,
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow Shak.

REFLEXIBI'LITY. n. s [from reflexible.] The quality of being reflexible.

Reflexibility of rays is their disposition to be reflected or turned back into the same medium from any other medium, upon whose surface they fall, and rays are more or less reflexible, which are turned back more or less easily Newton.

REFLE'XIBLE. adj. [from reflexus, Lat.] Capable to be thrown back.

Sir Isaac Newton has demonstrated, by convincing experiments, that the light of the sun consists of rays differently refrangible and reflexible, and that those rays are differently reflexible, that are differently refrangible. Cheyne.

REFLE'XIVE. adj. [reflexus, Lat.] Having respect to something past.

That assurance reflexive cannot be a divine faith, but at the most an human, yet such as perhaps I may have no doubting mixed with. Hammond.

REFLE'XIVELY. adv. [from reflexive.] In a backward direction.

Solomon tells us life and death are in the power of the tongue, and that not only directly in regard of the good or ill we may do to others, but reflexively also in respect of what may rebound to ourselves. Govern. of the Tongue.

REFLOA'T. n. s. [re and float.] Ebb; reflux.

The main fountain reflux of the sea, is by consent of the universe, as part of the diurnal motion Bacon.

To REFLOU'RISH. v. a. [re and flourish.] To flourish anew.

Virtue given for lost
Revives, reflourishes, then vigorous most,
When most unactive deem'd Milton's Agonistes.

To REFLO'W. v. n. [refluer, Fr. re and flow.] To flow back.

REFLU'ENT. adj. [refluens, Lat.] Running back; flowing back.

The river receives the refluent blood almost from all parts of the abdomen Arbuthnot

Tell, by what paths,
Back to the fountain's head the sea conveys
The refluent rivers, and the land repays. Blackmore

REFLU'X. n. s. [reflux, Fr refluxus, Lat.] Backward course of water.

Besides
Mine own that 'bide upon me, all from me
Shall with a fierce reflux on me redound. Milton.

The variety of the flux and reflux of Euripus, or whether the same do ebb and flow seven times a day, is controvertible. Brown.

REFOCILLA'TION. n. s. [refocillo, Lat.] Restoration of strength by refreshment.

To REFO'RM. v. a. [reformo, Lat. reformer, Fr.] To change from worse to better.

A sect in England, following the very same rule of policy, seeketh to reform even the French reformation, and purge out from thence all dregs of popery. Hooker

Seat worthier of Gods, was built
With second thoughts, reforming what was old. Milton.

May no such storm
Fall on our times, where ruin must reform Donh.

Now low'ring looks presage approaching storms,
And now prevailing love her face reforms Dryden

One cannot attempt the perfect reforming the languages of the world, without rendering himself ridiculous Locke.

The example alone of a vicious prince will corrupt an age, but that of a good one will not reform it. Swift

To REFO'RM. v. n. To pass by change from worse to better.

Was his doctrine of the mass struck out in this conflict? or did it give him occasion of reforming in this point? Atterbury

REFO'RM. n s. [Fr.] Reformation.

REFORMA'TION. n. s. [reformation, Fr. from reform]

1. Change from worse to better; commonly used of human manners

Never came reformation in a flood
With such a heady current, scow'ring faults,
Nor ever Hydra-headed wilfulness
So soon did lose his seat, as in this king Shakesp.

Satire lavishes vice into reformation Dryden.

The pagan converts mention this great reformation of those who had been the greatest sinners, with that sudden and surprising change, which the christian religion made in the lives of the most profligate. Addison.

2. [By way of eminence.] The change of religion from the corruptions of popery to its primitive state.

The burden of the reformation lay on Luther's shoulders. Atterbury.

REFO'RMER. n. s. [from reform.]

1. One who makes a change for the better; an amender.

Publick reformers had need first practise that on their own hearts, which they purpose to try on others King Charles.

The complaint is more general, than the endeavours to redress it abroad every man would be a reformer, how very few at home? Sprat.

It was honour enough, to behold the English churches, reformed, that is, delivered from the reformers. South.

2. Those who changed religion from popish corruptions and innovations.

Our first reformers were famous confessors and martyrs all over the world. Bacon.

To REFRA'CT v. a. [refractus, Lat.] To break the natural course of rays.

If its angle of incidence be large, and the refractive power of the medium not very strong to throw it far from the perpendicular, it will be refracted Cheyne's Philosophical Principles.

Rays of light are urged by the refracting media Cheyne.

Refracted from yon eastern cloud,
The grand etherial bow shoots up. Thomson.

REFRA'CTION. n s. [refraction, Fr.]

Refraction, in general, is the incurvation or change of determination in the body moved, which happens to it whilst it enters or penetrates any medium: in dioptricks, it is the variation of a ray of light from that right line, which it would have passed on in, had not the density of the medium turned it aside Harris.

Refraction, out of the rarer medium into the denser, is made towards the perpendicular. Newton.

REFRA'CTIVE. adj. [from refract.] Having the power of refraction.

Those superfices of transparent bodies reflect the greatest quantity of light, which have the greatest refracting power, that is, which intercede mediums that differ most in their refractive densities. Newton's Opticks.

REFRA'CTORINESS. n. s. [from refractory.] Sullen obstinacy.

I did never allow any man's refractoriness against the privileges and orders of the houses K Charles.

Great complaint was made by the presbyterian gang, of refractoriness to obey the parliament's order Saunderson.

REFRA'CTORY. adj. [refractaire, Fr. refractarius, Lat and so should be written refractary. It is now accented on the first syllable, but by Shakespeare on the second] Obstinate; perverse; contumacious.

There is a law in each well-ordered nation,
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory Shakesp.

A rough hewn seaman being brought before a wise justice for some misdemeanor, was by him ordered to be sent away to prison, and was refractory after he heard his doom, insomuch as he would not stir a foot from the place where he stood, saying, it was better to stand where he was, than go to a worse place. Bacon's Apophthegms.

Vulgar compliance with any illegal and extravagant ways, like violent motions in nature, soon grows weary of itself, and ends in a refractory sullenness. King Charles.

Refractory mortal! if thou wilt not trust thy friends, take what follows, know assuredly, before next full moon, that thou wilt be hung up in chains. Arbuthnot's Hist. of J. Bull.

These atoms of theirs may have it in them, but they are refractory and sullen; and therefore, like men of the same tempers, must be banged and buffeted into reason. Bentley.

RE'FRAGABLE. adj. [refragabilis, Lat.] Capable of confutation and conviction.

To REFRAI'N. v. a. [refrener, Fr. re and frænum, Lat.] To hold back; to keep from action.

Hold not thy tongue, O God, keep not still silence, refrain not thyself. Psalm lxxxiii 1.

My son, walk not thou in the way with them, refrain thy foot from their path. Proverbs, i. 15.

Nor from the holy one of heav'n
Refrain'd his tongue. Milton.

Neptune aton'd, his wrath shall now refrain,
Or thwart the synod of the gods in vain. Pope.

To REFRAI'N. v. n. To forbear; to abstain; to spare.

In what place, or upon what consideration soever it be, they do it, were it in their own opinion of no force being done, they would undoubtedly refrain to do it. Hooker

For my name's sake will I defer mine anger, and refrain for thee, that I cut thee not off Isaiah

That they fed not on flesh, at least the faithful party before the flood, may become more probable, because they refrained therefrom some time after Brown's Vulg. Err

REFRANGIBI LITY. n. s. [from refrangible.]

Refrangibility of the rays of light, is their disposition to be refracted or turned out of their way, in passing out of one transparent body or medium into another Newton

REFRA'NGIBLE. adj [re and frango, Lat.]

As some rays are more refrangible than others, that is, are more turned out of their course, in passing from one medium to another, it follows, that after such refraction, they will be separated, and their distinct colour observed. Locke

REFRENA'TION. n. s. [re and fræno, Lat.] The act of restraining.

To REFRESH. v a. [refraischer, Fr. refrigero, Lat.]

He was in no danger to be overtaken, so that he was content to refresh his men Clarendon

His meals are coarse and short, his employment warrantable, his sleep certain and refreshing, neither interrupted with the lashes of a guilty mind, nor the aches of a crazy body South

If you would have trees to thrive, take care that no plants be near them, which may deprive them of nourishment, or hinder refreshings and helps that they might receive Mortimer

2. To improve by new touches any thing impaired.

The rest refresh the scaly snakes, that fold
The shield of Pallas, and renew their gold. Dryd

3. To refrigerate; to cool.

A dew coming after heat refresheth Eccl xliii.22

REFRE'SHER. n. s. [from refresh.] That which refreshes.

The kind refresher of the summer heats Thoms.

REFRE'SHMENT n. s. [from refresh.]

1. Relief after pain, want, or fatigue.

2. That which gives relief, as food, rest.

He was full of agony and horrour upon the approach of a dismal death, and so had most need of the refreshments of society, and the friendly assistance of his disciples. South

Such honest refreshments and comforts of life, our christian liberty has made it lawful for us to use. Spratt

REFRE'T. n. s. The burden of a song. Dict

REFRI'GERANT. adj. [refrigerant, Fr from refrigerate.] Cooling; mitigating heat.

In the cure of gangrenes, you must beware of dry heat, and resort to things that are refrigerant, with an inward warmth and virtue of cherishing. Bacon.

If it arise from an external cause, apply refrigerants, without any preceding evacuation. Wiseman.

To REFRI'GERATE. v. a. [refrigero, re and frigus, Lat.] To cool.

The great breezes, which the motion of the air in great circles, such as the girdle of the world produceth, do refrigerate; and therefore in those parts noon is nothing so hot, when the breezes are great, as about ten of the clock in the forenoon Bacon.

Whether they be refrigerated inclinatorily or somewhat equinoxically, though in a lesser degree, they discover some verticity. Brown.

REFRIGERA'TION. n. s. [refrigeratio, Lat. refrigeration, Fr.] The act of cooling; the state of being cooled.

Divers do stut, the cause may be the refrigeration of the tongue, whereby it is less apt to move. Bacon

If the mere refrigeration of the air would fit it for breathing, this might be somewhat helped with bellows. Wilkins.

REFRI'GERATIVE. } adj. [refrigeratif,
REFRI'GERATORY. } Fr. refrigeratorius, Lat.] Cooling; having the power to cool.

REFRI'GERATORY. n. s.

1. That part of a distilling vessel that is placed about the head of a still, and filled with water to cool the condensing vapours; but this is now generally done by a worm or spiral pipe, turning through a tub of cold water. Quincy.

2. Any thing internally cooling

A delicate wine, and a durable refrigeratory Mort

REFRIGERIUM n. s. [Lat.] Cool refreshment, refrigeration.

It must be acknowledged, the ancients have talked much of annual refrigeriums, respites or intervals of punishment to the damned, as particularly on the festivals South.

REFT. part. pret of reave.

1. Deprived, taken away. Obsolete.

Thus we well left, he better reft,
In heaven to take his place,
That like by life and death, at last,
We may obtain like grace Ascham's Schoolmaster

I, in a desperate bay of death,
Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft,
Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom. Shakesp

Another ship had seiz'd on us,
And would have reft the fishers of their prey Shak.

Our dying hero from the continent
Ravish'd whole towns, and forts from Spaniards reft,
As his last legacy to Britain left. Waller

2. Preterite of reave. Took away. Obsolete.

So 'twixt them both, they not a lamkin left,
And when lambs fail'd, the old sheeps lives they reft. Shakesp

About his shoulders broad he threw
An airy hide of some wild beast, whom he
In savage forest by adventure slew,
And reft the spoil his ornament to be. Spenser

REFUGE n. s. [refuge, Fr refugium, Lat.]

1 Shelter from any danger or distress, protection.

Rocks, dens, and caves! but I in none of these
Find place or refuge Milton's Par Lost

The young vipers supposed to break through the belly of the dam, will, upon any fright, for protection run into it, for then the old one receives them in at her mouth, which way, the fright being past they will return again, which is a peculiar way of refuge. Brown.

Those, who take refuge in a multitude, have an Arian council to answer for. Atterbury.

2. That which gives shelter or protection.

The Lord will be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble Psalm ix. 9

They shall be your refuge from the avenger of blood. Joshua.

Fair majesty, the refuge and redress
Of those whom fate pursues. Dryden.

3. Expedient in distress.

This last old man,
Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome,
Lov'd me above the measure of a father
Their latest refuge was to send him. Shakesp.

4. Expedient in general.

Light must be supplied, among graceful refuges by terracing any story in danger of darkness Wotton.

To RE'FUGE. v. a. [refugier, Fr. from the noun] To shelter; to protect.

Silly beggars,
Who sitting in the stocks, refuge their shame,
That many have, and others must, sit there. Shak.

Dreads the vengeance of her injur'd lord,
Ev'n by those gods, who refug'd her, abhorr'd. Dryden.

REFUGEE'. n. s. [refugie, Fr.] One who flies to shelter or protection.

Poor refugees, at first they purchase here;
And soon as denizen'd, they domineer. Dryden.

This is become more necessary in some of their governments, since so many refugees settled among them Addison.

REFU'LGENCE. n. s. [from refulgent.] Splendour; brightness.

REFU'LGENT. adj. [refulgens, Lat.] Bright; shining; glittering; splendid.

He neither might, nor wish'd to know
A more refulgent light Waller.

So conspicuous and refulgent a truth is that of God's being the author of man's felicity, that the dispute is not so much concerning the thing, as concerning the manner of it Boyle

Agamemnon's train,
When his refulgent arms flash'd through the shady plain,
Fled from his well-known face. Dryden's Æneas.

REFU'LGENTLY. adv. [from refulgent.] In a shining manner.

To REFU'ND. v. n. [refundo, Lat.]

1. To pour back.

Stoop, and set your knee again my foot,
And in reguerdon of that duty done,
I gird thee with the valiant sword of York Shak.

To REGU'ERDON. v. a. [from the noun.] To reward. The verb and noun are both obsolete.
Long since we were resolved of your truth,
Your faithful service and your toil in war,
Yet never have you tasted your reward,
Or been reguerdon'd with so much as thanks. Shak.

RE'GULAR. adj. [regulier, Fr. regularis, Lat.]
1. Agreeable to rule; consistent with the mode prescribed.
The common cant of criticks is, that though the lines are good, it is not a regular piece. Guardian
The ways of heav'n are dark and intricate,
Puzzled in mazes, and perplex'd with errors,
Our understanding traces them in vain,
Lost and bewilder'd in the fruitless search;
Nor sees with how much art the windings run,
Nor where the regular confusion ends. Addison.
So when we view some well-proportion'd dome,
No monstrous height or breadth or length appear,
The whole at once is bold and regular Pope
2. Governed by strict regulations.
So just thy skill, so regular my rage Pope

The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy reliques,
Of her o'eaten faith are bound to Diomede. Shak.

Nor death itself can wholly wash their stains,
But long contracted filth ev'n in the soul remains,
The relicks of inveterate vice they wear,
And spots of sin. Dryden's Æneis.

2. It is often taken for the body deserted by the soul.

What needs my Shakespeare for his honour'd bones,
The labour of an age in piled stones?
Or that his hallow'd reliques should be hid
Under a starry-pointed pyramid? Milton

In peace, ye shades of our great grandsires, rest,
Eternal spring and rising flowers adorn
The relicks of each venerable urn Dryden.

Shall our relicks second birth receive?
Sleep we to wake, and only die to live? Prior.

Thy relicks, Rowe, to this fair shrine we trust,
And sacred place by Dryden's awful dust,

Beneath a rude and nameless stone he lies,
To which thy tomb shall guide enquiring eyes
Pope

3. That which is kept in memory of another, with a kind of religious veneration.

Cowls flutter'd into rags, then reliques leaves
The sport of winds Milton

This church is very rich in relicks, among the rest, they show a fragment of Thomas a Becket, as indeed there are very few treasuries of relicks in Italy, that have not a tooth or a bone of this saint.
Addison on Italy

RE'LICKLY adv. [from relick] In the manner of relicks A word not used nor elegantly formed.

2. Consequence; effect produced by the concurrence of co-operating causes

Did my judgment tell me, that the propositions sent to me were the results of the major part of their votes, I should then not suspect my own judgment for not speedily concurring with them King Charles

As in perfumes, compos'd with art and cost,
'Tis hard to say what scent is uppermost,
Nor this part musk or civet can we call,
Or amber, but a rich result of all;
So she was all a sweet, whose ev'ry part,
In due proportion mix'd, proclaim'd the maker's art. Dryden.

Buying of land is the result of a full and satiated gain men in trade seldom lay money out upon land, till their profit has brought in more than trade can employ Locke

3. Inference from premises.

These things are a result or judgment upon fact. South.

4. Resolve; decision. Improper.

Appoint some of your council presently
To sit with us, once more with better heed
To resurvey them Shakesp Henry V.

RESURRE'CTION. n. s. [resurrection, Fr. resurrectum, Lat.] Revival from the dead; return from the grave.

The Sadducees were grieved, that they taught, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead Acts iv 2

Nor after resurrection shall he stay
Longer on earth, than certain times t' appear
To his disciples Milton

He triumphs in his agonies, whilst the soul springs forward to the great object which she has always had in view, and leaves the body with an expectation of being remitted to her in a glorious and joyful resurrection. Addison's Spectator.

[illegible] Nature [illegible] last age, and which [illegible] shall be attested as the resurrection of Christ.

To RESUSCITATE. v. a. [resuscito, Lat.] To stir up anew; to revive.

We have beasts and birds for dissections, though divers parts, which you account vital, be perished and taken forth, resuscitating of some that seem dead in appearance. Bacon

RESUSCITA'TION. n. s. [from resuscitate.] The act of stirring up anew; the act of reviving, or state of being revived.

Your very obliging manner of enquiring after me, at your resuscitation, should have been sooner answered; I sincerely rejoice at your recovery Pope

To RETAI'L. v. a. [retailler, Fr]

1. To sell in small quantities, in consequence of selling at second hand

All encouragement should be given to artificers, and those who make, should also vend and retail their commodities Locke

2. To sell at second hand.

The sage dame,
By names of toasts, retails each batter'd jade. Pope

3. To tell in broken parts, or at second hand.

He is furnish'd with no certainties,
More than he haply may retail from me Shakesp

Bound with triumphant garlands will I come,
And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed,
To whom I will retail my conquest won,
And she shall be sole victress, Cæsar's Cæsar Shak.

RETAI'L. n. s [from the verb.] Sale by small quantities, or at second hand.

The author, to prevent such a monopoly of sense, is resolved to deal in it himself by retail Addison.

We force a wretched trade by beating down the sale,
And selling basely by retail. Swift's Miscellanies

RETAI'LER. n. s. [from retail.] One who sells by small quantities.

From these particulars we may guess at the rest, as retailers do of the whole piece, by taking a view of its ends Hakewill.

To RETAIN. v a. [retineo, Lat. retiner, French]

1. To keep, not to lose.

Where is the patience now,
That you so oft have boasted to retain? Shakesp

Though th' offending part felt mortal pain,
Th' immortal part its knowledge did retain. Denh

The vigour of this arm was never vain,
And that my wonted prowess I retain,
Witness these heaps of slaughter Dryden.

A tomb and fun'ral honours I decreed,
The place your armour and your name retains Dryd.

Whatever ideas the mind can receive and contemplate without the help of the body, it is reasonable to conclude, it can retain without the help of the body too Locke

2 To keep, not to lay aside.

Let me retain
The name and all the addition to a king,
The sway, beloved sons, be yours Shakesp.

As they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind Romans, i 22

Be obedient, and retain
Unalterably firm his love entire. Milton.

Although they retain the word mandrake in the text, yet they retract it in the margin Brown

They who have restored painting in Germany, not having seen any of those fair reliques of antiquity, have retained much of that barbarous method Dryden

3. To keep, not to dismiss.

Receive him that is mine own bowels, whom I would have retained with me Philemon xii. 13

Hollow rocks retain
The sound of blust'ring winds. Milton

4. To keep in pay, to hire.

[illegible] learned [illegible] now retained the [illegible] of their leader to write in its [illegible] Addison.

To RETAI'N. v. a.

1. To belong to; to depend on.

These betray upon the tongue no heat nor corrosiveness, but coldness mixed with a somewhat languid relish retaining to bitterness Boyle.

In animals many actions depend upon their living form, as well as that of mixtion, and though they wholly seem to retain to the body, depart upon disunion. Brown.

2. To keep; to continue. Not in use. Perhaps it should be remain.

No more can impure man retain and move
In the pure region of that worthy love,
Than earthly substance can unfore'd aspire,
And leave his nature to converse with fire. Donne

RETAI'NER n. s. [from retain.]

1. An adherent; a dependant; a hanger on.

You now are mounted,
Where pow'rs are your retainers. Shakesp

One darling inclination of mankind affects to be a retainer to religion, the spirit of opposition, that lived long before christianity, and can easily subsist without it Swift

A combination of honest men would endeavour to extirpate all the profligate immoral retainers to each side, that have nothing to recommend them but an implicit submission to their leaders Addison.

2. In common law, retainer signifieth a servant not menial nor familiar, that is not dwelling in his house, but only using or bearing his name or livery. Cowell.

3 The act of keeping dependants, or being in dependance.

By another law, the king's officers and farmers were to forfeit their places and holds, in case of unlawful retainer, or partaking in unlawful assemblies. Bacon's Hen VII

7. Remittance; payment from a distant place.

Within these two months, I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond Shak.

Bankers cannot have less money by them, than one twentieth part of their yearly returns. Locke.

8. Repayment; retribution; requital.

You made my liberty your late request
Is no return due from a grateful breast?
I grow impatient, till I find some way,
Great offices, with greater to repay Dryden.

Since these are some of the returns which we made to God after obtaining our successes, can we reasonably presume, that we are in the favour of God? Atterbury

Nothing better becomes a person in a publick character, than such a publick spirit, nor is there any thing likely to procure him larger returns of esteem. Atterbury.

Returns, like these, our mistress bids us make,
When from a foreign prince a gift her Britons take. Prior.

Ungrateful lord!
Would'st thou invade my life, as a return
For proffer'd love? Rowe

9. Act of restoring or giving back; restitution.

The other ground of God's sole property in any thing, is the gift, or rather the return of it made by man to God. South.

Be ashamed speaking again that which thou hast heard, and revealing of secrets. Ecclus xli 23.

Light was the wound, the prince's care unknown,
She might not, would not yet reveal her own. Waller

The answer to one who asked what time was, si non rogas intelligo, that is, the more I think of time, the less I understand it, might persuade one, that time which reveals all other things, is itself not to be discovered. Locke.

Thy throne is darkness in th' abyss of light,
A blaze of glory that forbids the sight,
O teach me to believe thee thus conceal'd,
And search no further than thyself reveal'd Dryd

2. To impart from heaven.

The sufferings of this life are not to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. Romans viii 18

REVEA'LER. n. s. [from reveal.]

1. Discoverer; one that shows or makes known.

The habit of faith in divinity is an argument of things unseen, as a stable assent unto things inevident, upon authority of the divine revealer Brown's Vulgar Errours.

The lives of the revealers may be justly set over against the revelation, to find whether they agree. Atterbury

2. One that discovers to view.

He brought a taper, the revealer light
Expos'd both crime and criminal to sight Dryden

To REVEL. v. n. [Skinner derives it from reveiller, Fr. to awake; Mr. Lye from reuselen, Dut. to rove loosely about, which is much countenanced by the old phrase, revel-rout.] To feast with loose and clamorous merriment.

My honey love,
Will we return unto thy father's house,
And revel it as bravely as the best. Shakesp.

We'll keep no great ado—a friend or two.
Tybalt being slain so late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much. Shakesp.

Antony, that revels long o' nights,
Is up. Shakesp Julius Cæsar

We shall have revelling to-night;
I will assume thy part in some disguise. Shakesp.

He can report you more odd tales
Of our outlaw Robin Hood,
That resell'd here in Sherewood,
Though he ne'er shot in his bow. Ben Jonson.

Were the doctrine new,
That the earth mov'd, this day would make it true,
For every part to dance and revel goes,
They tread the air, and fall not where they rose.
Donne.

Whene'er I resell'd in the women's bow'rs;
For first I sought her but at looser hours
The apples she had gather'd smelt most sweet. Prior

RE'VEL. n. s. [from the verb.] A feast with loose and noisy jollity.

3. To wreak one's wrongs on him that inflicted them. With the reciprocal pronoun, or in a passive sense.

Come, Antony and young Octavius,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius. Shakesp.

It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee. Shakesp.

Northumberland slew thy father,
And thine, lord Clifford, and you vow'd revenge.
—If I be not, heav'n's be reveng'd on me! Shakesp.

Edom hath revenged himself upon Judah. Ezekiel, xxv. 12.

O Lord, visit me, and revenge me of my persecutors. Jeremiah.

Who shall come to stand against thee, to be revenged for the unrighteous men? Wisdom, xii. 12.

Your fury of a wife,
Not yet content to be reveng'd on you,
Th' agents of your passion will pursue. Dryden.

REVENGE. n. s. [revenche, revanche, Fr.]

1. Return of an injury.

May we, with the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with further revenge? Shakesp.

I will make mine arrows drunk with blood; from the beginning of revenges upon the enemy. Deut. xxxii. 42.

[redacted] even with mercy; [redacted] by them, so they do by nature; being void of natural affection, they show their revenges of nature. Bacon.

What will not ambition and revenge descend to? Milton.

The satyr in a rage
Forgets his benefactors to laugh and bite,
And will of death and dire revenge write. Dryd.

Draco, the Athenian lawgiver, granted an impunity to [redacted] took revenge upon an adulterer. Broome.

2. The passion of vengeance; desire of inflicting one from whom hurt has been received.

Revenges burn in them: for their dear causes
Would, to the bleeding and the grim alarm,
Excite the mortified man. Shakesp. Macbeth.

3. Revenge is an act of passion; vengeance of justice. Injuries are revenged, crimes are avenged. This distinction is perhaps not always preserved.

RE'VENGEFUL. adj. [from revenge.] Vindictive; full of revenge; full of vengeance.

May my hands
Never brandish more revengeful steel
Over the glittering helmet of my foe Shakesp

If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,
Lo! here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword,
Which lude in this true breast. Shakesp

Into my borders now Jarbas falls,
And my revengeful brother scales the walls Denh.

Repenting England, this revengeful day,
To Philip's manes did an offering bring Dryden

RE'VENGEFULLY. adv. [from revengeful.] Vindictively.

He smil'd revengefully, and leap'd
Upon the floor, thence gazing at the skies,
His eye-balls fiery red, and glowing vengeance,
Gods, I accuse you not Dryden and Lee's Oedipus

RE'VENGER. n. s. [from revenge.]

1. One who revenges, one who wreaks his own or another's injuries.

May be, that better reason will assuage
The rash revenger's heat, words, well dispos'd,
Have secret pow'r t' appease enflamed rage Spenser

I do not know,
Wherefore my father should revengers want,
Having a son and friends Shakesp

So shall the great revenger ruinate
Him and his issue, by a dreadful fate Sandys.

Morocco's monarch
Had come in person, to have seen and known
The injur'd world's revenger and his own Waller

2. One who punishes crimes.

What government can be imagined, without judicial proceedings? and what methods of judicature, without a religious oath, which supposes an omniscient being, as conscious to its falsehood or truth, and a revenger of perjury? Bentley

RE'VENGEMENT. n. s. [from revenge.] Vengeance; return of an injury.

It may dwell
In her son's flesh to mind revengement,
And be for all chaste dames an endless monument Spenser

By the perclose of the same verse, vagabond is understood for such a one as travelleth in fear of revengement Raleigh.

RE'VENGINGLY. adv. [from revenging.] With vengeance; vindictively.

I've bely'd a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on't
Revengingly enfeebles me Shakesp Cymbeline

REVE'NUE. n. s. [revenu, Fr. Its accent is uncertain.] Income; annual profits received from lands or other funds.

They privily send over unto them the revenues wherewith they are there maintained Spenser

And in her heart scorns our poverty. Shakesp

Only I retain
The name and all th' addition to a king,
The sway, revenue, beloved sons, be yours. Shak.

Many offices are of so small revenue, as not to furnish a man with what is sufficient for the support of his life. Temple.

If the woman could have been contented with golden eggs, she might have kept that revenue on still. L'Estrange.

His vassals easy, and the owner blest,
They pay a trifle and enjoy the rest;
Not so a nation's revenues are paid,
The servant's faults are on the master laid Swift.

When men grow great from their revenue spent,
And fly from bailiffs into parliament. Young.

To REVE'RB. v. a. [reverbero, Lat.] To resound; to reverberate. Not in use.

[redacted] state, with better judgment check
This [redacted]ous rashness:
The youngest daughter does not love thee least,
Nor are those empty hearted, whose loud sound
Reverbs no hollowness. Shakesp King Lear.

REVE'RBERANT. adj. [reverberans, Lat.] Resounding; beating back. The reading in the following passage should be, I think, reverberant.

Hollow your name to the reverberate hills,
And make the babbling gossip of the air
Cry out, Olivia. Shakesp Twelfth Night

To REVE'RBERATE. v. a. [reverbero, Lat reverberer, Fr.]

1. To beat back.

Nor doth he know them for aught,
Till he behold them formed in th' applause
Where they're extended, which, like an arch, reverb'rates
The sound again Shakesp

As the sight of the eye is like a glass, so is the ear a sinuous cave, with a hard bone, to stop and reverberate the sound Bacon.

As we, to improve the nobler kinds of fruits, are at the expence of walls to receive and reverberate the faint rays of the sun, so we, by the help of a good soil, equal the production of warmer countries Swift

2. To heat in an intense furnace, where the flame is reverberated upon the matter to be melted or cleaned.

Crocus martis, that is steel corroded with vinegar or sulphur, and after reverberated with fire, the loadstone will not attract Brown

1. To be driven back; to bound back.

The rays of royal majesty reverberated so strongly upon Villerio, that they dispelled all clouds Howel

2. To resound.

Start
And echo with the clamour of thy drum,
And ev'n at hand a drum is ready brac'd,
That shall reverberate all as well as thine Shakesp

REVERBERA'TION. n. s. [reverberation, Fr. from reverberate] The act of beating or driving back.

To the reflection of visibles, small glasses suffice, but to the reverberation of audibles, are required greater spaces Bacon

The first repetitions follow very thick, for two parallel walls beat the sound back on each other, like the several reverberations of the same image from two opposite looking-glasses. Addison.

REVE'RBERATORY. adj. [reverberatoire, Fr] Returning; beating back.

Good lime may be made of all kinds of flints, but they are hard to burn, except in a reverberatory kiln Moxon

To REVE'RE. v. a. [reverer, Fr. revereor, Lat] To reverence, to honour; to venerate; to regard with awe.

An emperor often stamped on his coins the face or ornaments of his colleague, and we may suppose Lucius Verus would omit no opportunity of doing honour to Marcus Aurelius, whom he rather revered as his father, than treated as his partner in the empire Addison's Remarks on Italy

Jove shall again revere your pow'r,
And rise a swan, or fall a show'r Prior

Taught 'em how clemency made pow'r rever'd,
And that the prince belov'd was truly fear'd. Prior

REVE'RENCE. n. s. [reverence, Fr. reverentia, Lat.]

1. Veneration; respect; awful regard.

When quarrels and factions are carried openly it is a sign the reverence of government is lost Bacon's Essay

Higher of the genial bed,
And with mysterious reverence I deem Milton.

In your prayers use reverent postures and the lowest gestures of humility, remembering that we speak to God, in our reverence to whom we cannot exceed Taylor

A poet cannot have too great a reverence for readers. Dryden.

The fear acceptable to God, is a filial fear, an awful reverence of the divine nature, proceeding from a just esteem of his perfections, which produces in us an inclination to his service, and an unwillingness to offend him. Rogers.

2. An act of obeisance; bow; courtesy.

Now lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence. Shakesp.

He led her easily forth,
Where Godfrey sat among his lords and peers,
She reverence did, then blush'd as one dismay'd Fairfax.

Had not men the hoary heads rever'd,
Or boys paid rev'rence when a man appear'd,
Both must have dy'd Dryden's Juvenal.

Upstarts the beldam,
And reverence made, accosted thus the queen. Dry.

The monarch
Commands into his court the beauteous Emily
So call'd, she came: the senate rose and paid
Becoming rev'rence to the royal maid. Dryden.

3. Title of the clergy.

Many now in health
Shall drop their blood, in approbation
Of what your reverence shall incite us to. Shakesp.

4. Poetical title of a father.

O my dear father! let this kiss
Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made Shakesp

To RE'VERENCE. v a. [from the noun.] To regard with reverence, to regard with awful respect.

Those that I rev'rence, those I fear, the wise,
At fools I laugh, not fear them Shakesp

While they pervert pure nature's healthful rules
To loathsome sickness, worthily since they God's image did not reverence in themselves. Milt

He slew Action, but despoil'd him not,
Nor in his hate the funeral rites forgot,
Arm'd as he was, he sent him whole below,
And reverenc'd thus the manes of his foe Dryden.

As his goodness will forbid us to dread him as slaves, so his majesty will command us to reverence him as sons Rogers.

He presents every one so often before God in his prayers, that he never thinks he can esteem, reverence, or serve those enough, for whom he implores so many mercies from God. Law

RE'VERENCER n s. [from reverence.] One who regards with reverence.

The Athenians, quite sunk in their affairs, had little commerce with the rest of Greece, and were become great reverencers of crowned heads Swift.

RE'VEREND. adj [reverend, Fr. reverendus, Lat]

1. Venerable; deserving reverence; enforcing respect by his appearance.

Let his lack of years be no impediment, to let him lack a reverend estimation Shakesp

That oaths made in reverential fear
Of love and his wrath may any forswear. Donne.
The least degree of contempt weakens religion; it properly consisting in a reverential esteem of things sacred South.
The reason of the institution being forgot, the after-ages perverted it, supposing only a reverential gratitude paid to the earth as the common parent. Woodward's Nat. Hist
All look up, with reverential awe,
At crimes that 'scape, or triumph o'er the law
Pope

REVERE'NTIALLY. adv. [from reverential.] With show of reverence.

The Jews, reverentially observing the situation of their temple, place their heads from North to South. Brown

RE'VERENTLY. adv. [from reverent] Respectfully; with awe; with reverence

Chide him for faults, and do it reverently Shak.
His disciples here,
By their great master sent to preach him every where,
Most reverently receiv'd Drayton
To nearest ports their shatter'd ships repair,
Where by our dreadful cannon they lay aw'd,
So reverently men quit th' open air,
When thunder speaks the angry gods abroad
Dryden
Then down with all thy boasted volumes, down,
Only reserve the sacred one
Low, reverently low,
Make thy stubborn knowledge bow:
To look to heav'n be blind to all below Prior.

REVE'RER. n. s. [from revere.] One who venerates; one who reveres.

Michael's sword stay'd not,
But with swift wheel reverse, deep ent'ring shar'd

4 To contradict; to repeal.

Better it was in the eye of his understanding, that sometime an erroneous sentence definitive should prevail, till the same authority, perceiving such oversight, might afterwards correct or reverse it, than that strifes should have nipples to grow, and not come speedily unto some end. Hooker's Preface.
A decree was made, that they had facilitated their liberties; and albeit they made great means, yet could they not procure this sentence to be reversed. Bacon.
Death, his doom, which I
To mitigate thus plead, not to reverse,
To better life shall yield him. Milton.
Though grace may have reversed the condemning sentence, and sealed the sinner's pardon before God, yet it may have left no transcript of that pardon in the sinner's breast. South.
Those seem to do best, who, taking useful hints from facts, carry them in their minds to be judged of, by what they shall find in history to confirm or reverse these imperfect observations. Locke.

5. To turn to the contrary.

These plain characters we rarely find;
Though strong the bent, yet quick the turns of mind,
Or passling contraries confound the whole,
Or affectations quite reverse the soul. Pope

6. To put each in the place of the other.

With what tyranny custom governs men! it makes that reputable in one age, which was a vice in another, and reverses even the distinctions of good and evil Rogers.

The youth with songs and rhimes
Some dance, some hale the rope Denham

2. The consonance of verses; the correspondence of the last sound of one verse to the last sound or syllable of another

For rhyme the rudder is of verses,
With which like ships they steer their courses Hudibras

Such was the news, indeed, but songs and rhymes
Prevail as much in these hard iron times,
As would a plump of trembling fowl, that rise
Against an eagle sousing from the skies Dryden

If Cupid throws a single dart,
We make him wound the lover's heart,
But if he takes his bow and quiver,
'Tis sure he must transfix the liver,
For rhime with reason may dispense,
And sound has right to govern sense. Prior

3. Poetry, a poem.

All his manly power it did disperse,
As he were warmed with inchanted rhimes,
That oftentimes he quak'd Fairy Queen.

Who would not sing for Lycidas? he knew
Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme Milton.

Now sportive youth,
Carol incondite rhythms with suiting notes,
And quaver inharmonious Philips

4. A word of sound to answer to another word.

What wise means to gain it hast thou chose?
Know, fame and fortune both are made of prose
Is thy ambition sweating for a rhyme,
Thou unambitious fool, at this late time? Young

RHYME or reason Number or sense.

I was promis'd on a time,
To have reason for my rhyme,
But from that time unto this season,
I had neither rhyme nor reason. Spenser

The guiltiness of my mind drove the grossness of the foppery into a received belief, in despight of the teeth of all rhime and reason, that they were furies. Shakesp

To RHYME. v. n.

1. To agree in sound.

He was too warm on picking work to dwell,
But fagotted his notions as they fell,
And, if they rhim'd and rattled, all was well. Dryden.

2. To make verses.

These fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhime themselves into ladies favours, they do always reason themselves out again. Shakesp.

There march'd the bard and blockhead side by side,
Who rhym'd for hire, and patronis'd for pride. Pope

RHY'MER. } n. s. [from rhyme.] One
RHY'MSTER. } who makes rhymes; a versifier; a poet in contempt.

It was made penal to the English, to permit the Irish to graze upon their lands, to entertain any of their minstrels, rhimers, or news-tellers Davies on Ireland.

Rhymer, come on, and do the worst you can,
I fear not you, nor yet a better man. Dryden.

Milton's rhime is constrained at an age, when the passion of love makes every man a rhimer, though not a poet. Dryden.

I speak of those who are only rhimsters. Dennis.

RHY'THMICAL. adj. [ῥυθμικὸς, rythmique, Fr from rhyme or rhythm.] Harmonical; having one sound proportioned to another.

RIB. n s [ribbe, Sax.]

1. A bone in the body.

Of these there are twenty-four in number, viz. twelve on each side the twelve vertebræ of the back, they are segments of a circle; they grow flat and broad, as they approach the sternum, but the nearer they are to the vertebræ, the rounder and thicker they are, at which end they have a round head, which, being covered with a cartilage, is received into the sinus in the bodies of the vertebræ the ribs, thus articulated, make an acute angle with the lower vertebræ the ribs have each a small canal or sinus, which runs along their under sides, in which lies a nerve, vein, and artery, their extremities, which are fastened to the sternum, are cartilaginous, and the cartilages make an obtuse angle with the bony part of the ribs, this angle respects the head the cartilages are harder in women than in men, that they may better bear the weight of their breasts the ribs are of two sorts, the seven upper are called true ribs, because their cartilaginous ends are received into the sinus of the sternum the five lower are called false ribs, because they are softer and shorter, of which only the first is joined to the extremity of the sternum, the cartilaginous extremities of the rest being tied to one another, and thereby leaving a greater space for the dilatation of the stomach and intrails the last of these short ribs is shorter than all the rest it is not tied to them, but sometimes to the musculus obliquus descendens Quincy

Why do I yield to that suggestion,
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair,
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature! Shakesp. Macbeth

He open'd my left side, and took
From thence a rib, with cordial spirits warm
And life blood streaming fresh. Milton.

Sure he, who first the passage try'd,
In harden'd oak his heart did hide,
And ribs of iron arm'd his side Dryden

2. Any piece of timber or other matter which strengthens the side.

I should not see the sandy hour glass run,
But I should think of shallows and of flats,
And see my wealthy Andrew dock'd in sand,
Vailing her high top lower than her ribs,
To kiss her burial Shakesp

The ships with shatter'd ribs scarce creeping from the seas. Drayton.

3. Any prominence running in lines: as the stalks of a leaf.

RI'BALD. n. s. [ribauld, Fr. ribaldo, Ital.] A loose, rough, mean, brutal wretch.

That lewd ribbald, with vile lust advanc'd,
Laid first his filthy hands on virgin clean,
To spoil her dainty corse so fair and sheen. Spenser.

You ribauld nag of Egypt,
The breese upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails, and flies Shakesp.

The busy day,
Wak'd by the lark, has rous'd the ribald crows,
And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer Shakesp

Ne'er one sprig of laurel grac'd these ribbalds,

Thy armour
I'll frush, and unlock the rivets all,
But I'll be master of it.

Though Valerio's fair, and though she [illegible] too,
'Gainst her my soul is arm'd on every part;
Yet there are secret rivets to my heart,
Where Bereuice's charms have found the way,
Subtle as lightnings. Dryden's Tyrannick Love.

The verse in fashion is, when numbers flow
So smooth and equal, that no sight can find
The rivet, where the polish'd piece was join'd. Dryden.

The rivets of those wings inclos'd
Fit that each other. Dryden's Don Sebastian.

This instrument should move easy upon the rivet Sharp.

To RI'VET. v a. [from the noun.]

SAB

S HAS in English the same hissing sound as in other languages, and unhappily prevails in so many of our words that it produces in the ear of a foreigner a continued sibilation.

In the beginning of words it has invariably its natural and genuine sound: in the middle it is sometimes uttered with a stronger appulse of the tongue to the palate, like z, as rose, roseate, rosy, osier, nosel, resident, busy, business. It sometimes keeps its natural sound; as loose, designation, for which I know not whether any rules can be given.

In the end of monosyllables it is sometimes s, as in this; and sometimes z, as in as, has; and generally where es stands in verbs for eth, as gives. It seems to be established as a rule, that no noun singular should end with s single: therefore in words written with diphthongs, and naturally long, an e is nevertheless added at the end, as goose, house; and where the syllable is short the s is doubled, and was once sse, as ass, anciently asse; wilderness, anciently wildernesse; distress, anciently distresse

SABA'OTH. n. s. [Heb] Signifying an army.

Holy Lord God of sabaoth, that is, Lord of hosts Common Prayer

1 A day appointed by God among the Jews, and from them established among Christians for publick worship, the seventh day set apart from works of labour to be employed in piety.

I purpose,
And by our holy sabbath have I sworn,
To have the due and forfeit of my bond Shakesp.

Glad we return'd up to the coasts of light,
Ere sabbath ev'ning Milton

Here ev'ry day was sabbath only free
From hours of pray'r, for hours of charity,
Such as the Jews from servile toil release,
Where works of mercy were a part of rest
Such as blest angels exercise above,
Vary'd with sacred hymns and acts of love,
Such sabbaths as that one she now enjoys,
Ev'n that perpetual one, which she employs
For such vicissitudes in heav'n there are,
In praise alternate, and alternate pray'r Dryden.

2. Intermission of pain or sorrow, time of rest.

Never any sabbath of release
Could free his travels and afflictions deep
Daniel's C War

Nor can his blessed soul look down from heav'n,

I first adventure, follow me who list,
And be the second English satirist. Hall.

Wycherly, in his writings, is the sharpest satyrist of his time, but, in his nature, he has all the softness of the tenderest dispositions in his writings he is severe, bold, undertaking; in his nature gentle, modest, inoffensive Granville

All vain pretenders have been constantly the topicks of the most candid satyrists, from the Codrus of Juvenal to the Damon of Boileau Cleland.

Yet soft his nature, though severe his lay,
His anger moral, and his wisdom gay
Blest satyrist! who touch'd the mean so true,
As show'd vice had his hate and pity too. Pope.

To SA'TIRIZE. v. a. [satirizer, Fr. from satire.] To censure as in a satire.

Covetousness is described as a veil cast over the true meaning of the poet, which was to satirize his prodigality and voluptuousness. Dryden.

Should a writer single out and point his raillery at particular persons, or satirize the miserable he might be sure of pleasing a great part of his readers, but must be a very ill man if he could please himself. Addison.

I insist that my lion's mouth be not defiled with scandal, for I would not make use of him to revile the human species, and satirize his betters Addison's Spectator

It is as hard to satirize well a man of distinguished vices, as to praise well a man of distinguished virtues. Swift

SATISFA'CTION. n. s. [satisfactio, Lat. satisfaction, Fr.]

1. The act of pleasing to the full, or state of being pleased.

Run over the circle of earthly pleasures, and had not God secured a man a solid pleasure from his own actions, he would be forced to complain that pleasure was not satisfaction South.

2. The act of pleasing.

The mind, having a power to suspend the execution and satisfaction of any of its desires, is at liberty to consider the objects of them Locke.

There is no greater argument of a light and inconsiderate person, than prophanely to scoff at religion Tillotson.

Such is love,
And such the laws of his fantastick empire,
The wanton boy delights to bend the mighty,
And scoffs at the vain wisdom of the wise Rowe.

SCOFF. n. s. [from the verb.] Contemptuous ridicule; expression of scorn; contumelious language.

Our answer therefore to their reasons is, no; to their scoffs, nothing Holder

With scoffs and scorns, and contumelious taunts,
In open market-place produc'd they me
Shakesp Henry VI

How could men surrender up their reason to flattery, more abusive and reproachful than the rudest scoffs and the sharpest invectives? South

Some little souls, that have got a smattering of astronomy or chemistry, for want of a due acquaintance with other sciences, make a scoff at them all, in comparison of their favourite science Watts.

SCO'FFER n. s. [from scoff.] Insolent ridiculer; saucy scorner, contumelious reproacher.

Sell when you can, you are not for all markets
Cry the man mercy, love him, take his offer,
Foul is the most foul, being found to be a scoffer
Shakesp

Divers have hoarded themselves among these profane scoffers, not that they are convinced by their reasons, but terrified by their contumelies. Governm of the Tongue

Consider what the apostle tells these scoffers they were ignorant of, not that there was a deluge, but he tells them that they were ignorant that the heavens and the earth of old were so and so constituted Burnet's Theory of the Earth

Melted Alpine snows
The mountain cisterns fill, those ample stores
Of water scoop'd among the hollow rocks Thomson.

3. To empty by lading.

If some penurious source by chance appear'd
Scanty of waters, when you scoop'd it dry,
And offer'd the full helmet up to Cato,
Did he not dash th' untasted moisture from him?
Addison

4. To carry off so as to leave the place hollow.

A spectator would think this circular mound had been actually scooped out of that hollow space Spectator

Her fore-feet are broad, that she may scoop away much earth at a time Addison

To his single eye, that in his forehead glar'd
Like a full moon, or a broad burnish'd shield,
A forky staff we dext'rously applied,
Which, in the spacious socket turning round,
Scoopt out the big round jelly from its orb Addison

5. To cut into hollowness or depth.

Whatever part of the harbour they scoop in, it has an influence on all the rest, for the sea immediately works the whole bottom to a level. Add on Italy.

These carbuncles the Indians will scoop, so as to hold above a pint. Arbuthnot on Coins.

It much conduces how to scare
The little race of birds, that hop
From spray to spray, scooping the costliest fruit,
Inattinte, undisturb'd. Philips.

The genius of the place
Or helps the ambitious hill the heav'n to scale,
Or scoops in circling theatres the vale. Pope.

SCO'OPER. n. s. [from scoop.] One who scoops.

SCOPE. n. s. [scopus, Lat.]

1. Aim; intention; drift.

Your scope is as mine own,
So to enforce or qualify the laws,
As to your soul seems good. Shakesp Meas for Meas.

His coming hither hath no further scope
Than for his lineal royalties, and to beg
Enfranchisement immediate on his knees
Shakesp Richard II.

Had the whole scope of the author been answerable to his title, he would have only undertaken to prove what every man is convinced of, but the drift of the pamphlet is to stir up our compassion towards the rebels Addison.

2. Thing aimed at; mark; final end

The scope of all their pleading against man's authority is to overthrow such laws and constitutions in the church, as depending thereupon, if they should therefore be taken away, would leave neither face nor memory of church to continue long in the world Hooker

Now was the time
To aim their counsels to the fairest scope. Hubb. Ta.

We should impute the war to the scope at which it aimeth Raleigh

He, in what he counsels, and in what excels,
Mistrustful, grounds his courage on despair
And utter dissolution, as the scope
Of all his aim Milton's Par Lost

3. Room; space, amplitude of intellectual view.

An heroick poet is not tied to a bare representation of what is true, but that he might let himself loose to visionary objects, which may give him a freer scope for imagination Dryden

These theorems being admitted into opticks, there would be scope enough of handling that science voluminously, after a new manner, not only by teaching those things which tend to the perfection of vision, but also by determining mathematically all kinds of phenomena of colours which could be produced by refraction Newton's Opticks

4 Liberty; freedom from restraint.

If this constrain them to grant that their axiom is not to take any place, save in those things only where the church hath larger scope, it resteth that they search out some stronger reason Hooker

Ah, cut my lace asunder,
That my pent heart may have some scope to beat,
Or else I swoon with this dread killing news Shak

5. Liberty beyond just limits, licence.

Sith 'twas my fault to give the people scope,
'Twould be my tyranny to strike and gall them
For what I bid them do Shakesp

Being moody, give him line and scope,
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,
Confound themselves with working. Shak Hen IV.

6. Act of riot; sally.

As surfeit is the father of much fast,
So every scope, by the immoderate use,
Turns to restraint. Shakesp

7. Extended quantity.

The scopes of land granted to the first adventurers were too large, and the liberties and royalties were too great for subjects. Davies on Ireland.

8 It is out of use, except in the three first senses.

2. To burn.

Power was given to scorch men with fire
Rev xvi 8

The same that left thee by the cooling stream,
Safe from sun's heat, but scorch'd with beauty's beam Fairfax

You look with such contempt on pain,
That languishing you conquer more,
So lightnings which in storms appear
Scorch more than when the skies are clear Waller

The same beams that shine, scorch too. South.

I rave,
And, like a giddy bird in dead of night,
Fly round the fire that scorches me to death Dryd.

He, from whom the nations should receive
Justice and freedom, lives himself a slave,
Tortur'd by cruel change of wild desires,
Lash'd by mad rage, and scorch'd by brutal fires
Prior

To SCORCH v n. To be burnt superficially; to be dried up.

The swarthy Africans complain
To see the chariot of the sun
So nigh their scorching country run. Roscommon

The love was made in Autumn, and the hunting followed properly when the heats of that scorching country were declining Dryden

Scatter a little mungy straw or fern amongst your seedlings, to prevent the roots from scorching, and to receive the moisture that falls
Mortimer's Husb

My lord, you are a sectary;
That's the plain truth. Shakesp.
Romish catholick tenets are inconsistent, on the one hand, with the truth of religion professed and protested by the church of England, whence we are called protestants, and the anabaptists, and separatists, and sectaries, on the other hand, whose tenets are full of schism, and inconsistent with monarchy Bacon.
The number of sectaries does not concern the clergy in point of interest or conscience. Swift.

2. A follower; a pupil.

The sectaries of my celestial skill,
That wont to be the world's chief ornament,
They are under keep. Spenser

SECTA'TOR. n. s. [sectateur, Fr. sectator, Lat.] A follower; an imitator; a disciple.

Hereof the wiser sort and the best learned philosophers were not ignorant, as Cicero witnesseth, gathering the opinion of Aristotle and his sectators. Raleigh.

SE'CTION. n. s. [section, Fr. sectio, Lat.]

1. The act of cutting or dividing.

In the section of bodies, man, of all sensible creatures, has the fullest brain to his proportion Wotton.

2. A part divided from the rest.
3. A small and distinct part of a writing or book.

Instead of their law, which they might not read openly, they read of the prophets, that which in likeness of matter came nearest to each section of their law Hooker
The production of volatile salts I reserve till I mention them in another section. Boyle
Without breaking in upon the connection of his language, it is hardly possible to give a distinct view of his several arguments in distinct sections Locke

SE'CTOR. n s. [secteur, Fr.] In geometry

Sector is an instrument made of wood or metal, with a joint, and sometimes a piece to turn out to make a true square, with lines of sines, tangents, secants, equal parts, rhumbs, polygons, hours, latitudes, metals, and solids It is generally useful in all the practical parts of the mathematicks, and particularly contrived for navigation, surveying, astronomy, dialling, and projection of the sphere All the lines of the sector can be accommodated to any radius, which is done by taking off all divisions parallelwise, and not lengthwise, the ground of which practice is this, that parallels to the base of any plain triangle bear the same proportion to it as the parts of the legs above the parallel do to the whole legs Harris.

SE'CULAR adj. [secularis, Lat. seculier, Fr.]

1. Not spiritual, relating to affairs of the present world, not holy, worldly.

This, in every several man's actions of common life, appertaineth unto moral, in publick and politick secular affairs, unto civil wisdom. Hooker.

Truth and certainty are not secured by innate principles, but men are in the same uncertain floating estate with as without them Locke

That prince, who shall be so wise as, by established laws of liberty, to secure protection to the honest industry of mankind against the oppression of power, will quickly be too hard for his neighbours Locke

Deeper to wound, she shuns the fight,
She drops her arms to gain the field
Secures her conquest by her flight,
And triumphs when she seems to yield Prior

Nothing can be more artful than the address of Ulysses: he secures himself of a powerful advocate, by paying an ingenuous and laudable deference to his friend. Broome

2. To protect; to make safe.

I spread a cloud before the victor's sight,
Sustain'd the vanquish'd, and secur'd his flight,
Ev'n then secur'd him, when I sought with joy
The vow'd destruction of ungrateful Troy Dryd

Where two or three sciences are pursued at the same time, if one of them be dry, as logick, let another be more entertaining, to secure the mind from weariness. Watts

3. To insure.

SECU'RELY. adv. [from secure.]

1. Without fear; carelessly.

Love, that now long time securely slept
In Venus's lap, unarmed then and naked,
'Gan rear his head, by Clotho being waked Spens.

SE'DENTARY. adj [sedentaire, Fr. sedentario, Ital. sedentarius, from sedeo, Lat]

1. Passed in sitting still; wanting motion or action.

A sedentary life, appropriate to all students, crushes the bowels, and, for want of stirring the body, suffers the spirits to lie dormant. Harvey on Consumptions.

The blood of labouring people is more dense and heavy than those who live a sedentary life Arb

2 Torpid, inactive, sluggish, motionless

The sedentary earth,
That better might with far less compass move,
Serv'd by more noble than herself, attains
Her end without least motion Milton

Till length of years,
And sedentary numbness, craze my limbs
To a contemptible old age obscure Milt Agon

The soul, considered abstractedly from its passions, is of a remiss sedentary nature, slow in its resolves, and languishing in its executions Addison's Spectator

SEDGE n s [ſæcg, Sax. whence, in the provinces, a narrow flag is called a sag or seg] A growth of narrow flags, a narrow flag

The current, that with gentle murmur glides
Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth rage,
But when his fair course is not hindered,
He makes sweet musick with th' enamell'd stones
Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage,
And so by many winding nooks he strays,
With willing sport, to the wild ocean Shakesp.

Adonis, painted by a running brook,
And Cytherea all in sedges hid,
Which seem to move and wanton with her breath,
Even as the waving sedges play with wind Shak

In hotter countries a fly called lucciole, that shineth as the glow-worm, is chiefly upon fens and marshes, yet is not seen but in the height of summer, and sedge or other green of the fens give as good shade as bushes Bacon

He hid himself in the sedges adjoining Sandys.

My bonds I brake,

2. A prophet; one who foresees future events.

How soon hath thy prediction, seer blest!
Measur'd this transient world the race of time,
Till time stand fix'd Milton's Par. Lost.

By day your frighted seers
Shall call for fountains to express their tears,
And wish their eyes were floods by night from dreams
Of opening gulphs, black storms, and raging flames,
Starting amaz'd, shall to the people show
Emblems of heav'nly wrath, and mystick types of woe. Prior

SEE'RWOOD. n. s. See SEARWOOD. Dry wood.

Caught, like dry stubble fir'd, or like searwood,
Yet from the wound ensued no purple flood,
But look'd a bubbling mass of frying blood Dryd.

To SEIZE. v a. [saisir, Fr.]

1. To take hold of, to gripe, to grasp

Then as a tiger, who by chance hath spied,
In some purlieu, two gentle fawns at play,
Straight couches close, then rising changes oft
His couchant watch, as one who chose his ground,
Whence rushing he might surest seize them both,
Both grip'd in each paw Milton

2. To take possession of by force.

At last they seize
The scepter, and regard not David's sons Milton

3. To take possession of; to lay hold on, to invade suddenly.

In her sad breast the prince's fortunes roll,
And hope and doubt alternate seize her soul Pope

4. To take forcible possession of by law.

An escheator of London had arrested a clothier that was outlawed, and seized his goods Camden

It was judged, by the highest kind of judgment, that he should be banished, and his whole estate confiscated and seized, and his houses pulled down. Bacon.

5. To make possessed, to put in possession of.

So th' one for wrong, the other strives for right
As when a griffin, seized of his prey,
A dragon fierce encount'reth in his flight,
Through wildest air making his idle way F Queen.

So Pluto, seiz'd of Proserpine, convey'd
To hell's tremendous gloom th' affrighted maid,
There grimly smil'd, pleas'd with the beauteous prize,
Nor envied Jove his sunshine and his skies.
Addison's Cato.

To SEIZE. v. n To fix the grasp or the power on any thing.

Fairest Cordelia,
Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon
Be't lawful I take up what's cast away?
Shakesp King Lear

When there is a design of supplanting, that necessarily requires another of accusing even Jezebel projects not to seize on Naboth's vineyard without a precedent charge Decay of Piety.

SEI'ZIN. n. s [saisine, Fr.]

1. [In law.] Is of two sorts: seisin in fact, and seisin in law. Seisin in fact, is when a corporal possession is taken: seisin in law, is when something is done which the law accounteth a seisin, as an inrolment. This is as much as a right to lands and tenements, though the owner be by wrong dissessed of them. Cowell.

2. The act of taking possession.

Every indulged sin gives Satan livery and seisin of his heart, and a power to dispose of it as he pleases Decay of Piety

Seisin is the same, in the canon law, as livery and seisin at the common law Ayliffe's Parergon.

3. The thing possessed.

Many recoveries were had, as well by heirs as successors, of the seisin of their predecessors Hale.

SE'IZURE. n. s [from seize.]

1. The act of seizing.

2. The thing seized

Sufficient that thy pray'rs are heard, and death,
Then due by sentence when thou didst transgress,
Defeated of his seizure, many days
Giv'n thee of grace Milton's Par Lost

3. The act of taking forcible possession.

Thy lands, and all things that thou dost call thine
Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands Shak

In the general town he maintained a seizure and possession of the whole Wotton

Henry continued to burn protestants, after he had cast off the pope, and his seizure of ecclesiastical revenues cannot be reckoned as a mark of the church's liberty Swift

4. Gripe, possession.

And shall these hands, so lately purg'd of blood,
Unvoke this seizure, and this kind regret Shak

Make over thy honour by a deed of trust
And give me seizure of the mighty wealth Dryden

5 Catch.

Hevelius, in his accurate selenography, or description of the moon, hath well translated the known appellations of regions, seas, and mountains, unto the parts of that luminary Brown

SELF pronoun plur selves, [silba, Goth ⲥⲩⲗⲫ, ⲥⲩⲗⲫⲏ n, Sax self, selve, Dut.]

1 Its primary signification seems to be that of an adjective Very; particular, this above others, sometimes, one's own

Shoot another arrow that self way
Which you did shoot the first Shak Merch of Ven

The cruel ministers, by self and violent hands,
Took off her life Shakesp

On these self hills the air is so thin, that it is not sufficient to bear up the body of a bird Raleigh

At that self moment enters Palamon
The gate of Venus Dryden

2 It is united both to the personal pronouns, and to the neutral pronoun it, and is always added when they are used reciprocally, or return upon themselves as, I did not hurt him, he hurt himself, the people kiss me, but I clap myself, thou lovest thyself, though the world scorns thee

They cast to build a city,
And get themselves a name Milton

He permits
Within himself unworthy pow'rs to reign
Over free reason Milton

Self is that conscious thinking thing, which is sensible or conscious of pleasure and pain, capable of happiness and misery, and so is concerned for itself, as far as that consciousness extends Locke

3 It is sometimes used emphatically in the nominative case as, myself will decide it; I myself will come; himself shall revenge it This use of self, thus compounded, without the pronoun personal, is chiefly poetical

4. Compounded with him, a pronoun substantive, self is in appearance an adjective joined to my, thy, our, your, pronoun adjectives, it seems a substantive. Even when compounded with him it is at last found to be a substantive, by its variation in the plural, contrary to the nature of English adjectives, as himself, themselves.

No more be mention'd then of violence
Against ourselves, or wilful barrenness Milton

5. Myself, himself, themselves, and the rest may, contrary to the analogy of my, him, them, be used as nominatives.

6. It often adds only emphasis and force to the pronoun with which it is compounded: as, he did it himself.

A horse well bitted, which himself did dress.
Dryden.

And touch'd with miseries myself have known,
I learn to pity woes so like my own. Dryd.

7. It signifies the individual, as subject to his own contemplation or action.

The spark of noble courage now awake,
And strive your excellent self to excel Fairy Q

Next to the knowledge of God, this knowledge of our selves seems most worthy of our endeavour Hale

Since consciousness always accompanies thinking, and it is that that makes every one to be what he calls self, and thereby distinguishes himself from all other thinking things, in this alone consists personal identity, i e the sameness of a rational being Bacon

It is by the consciousness it has of its present thoughts and actions, that it is self to it self now, and so will be the same self, as far as the same consciousness can extend to actions past or to come Locke

The fondness we have for self, and the relation which other things have to our selves, furnishes another long rank of prejudices. Watts

8. It is much used in composition, which it is proper to explain by a train of examples It is to be observed, that its composition in Shakespeare is often harsh.

Then held she her tongue, and cast down a self accusing look, finding that in herself she had shot out of the bow of her affection a more quick opening of her mind than she minded to have done Sid

Alas! while we are wrapt in foggy mist
Of our self-love, so passions do deceive,
We think they hurt when most they do assist Sid

Till Strephon's plaining voice him nearer drew,
Where by his words his self-like case he knew Sid

Ah! where was first that cruel cunning found,
To frame of earth a vessel of the mind,
Where it should be to self-destruction bound? Sid

Before the door sat self-consuming care,
Day and night keeping wary watch and ward
Fairy Queen

My strange and self-abuse
Is the initiate fear that wants hard use Shak Macb

I have heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought I have spoke thereof,
But being over full of self affairs,
My mind did lose it Shak Mids. Night's Dream.

Nor know I aught
By me that's said or done amiss this night,
Unless self charity be sometimes a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin,
When violence assails us Shakesp Othello.

He walks, and that self-chain about his neck,
Which he forswore Shakesp

It is in my power, in one self-born hour,
To plant and o'erwhelm custom Shak Wint. Tale

His treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of day,
But self-affrighted tremble at his sin Shak. Rich. II

The stars above us govern our conditions,
Else one self-mate and mate could not beget
Such different issues. Shakesp.

I'm made of that self metal as my sister,
And prize me at her worth Shakesp King Lear.

In my school-days, when I lost one shaft,
I shot his fellow of the self-same flight
The self-same way, with more advised watch,
To find the other forth. Shakesp.

He may do some good on her
A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is Shakesp Romeo and Juliet

But lest myself be guilty of self-wrong,
I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song. Shak.

He conjunct, and flatt'ring his displeasure,
Tript me behind being down, insulted, rail'd,
Got praises of the king
For him attempting who was self-subdued. Shak.

The Everlasting fixt
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter Shakesp. Hamlet.

Know if his last purpose hold,
Or whether since he is advis'd by aught
To change the course He's full of alteration
And self reproving Shakesp. King Lear.

More or less to others paying,
Than by self-offences weighing
Shame to him whose cruel striking
Kills for faults of his own liking! Shakesp.

Bellona's bridegroom, lapt in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point. Shakesp Macbeth.

Self love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting. Shakesp Hen. V.

Anger is like
A full hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him Shakesp.

His lords desire him to have borne
His bruised helmet and his bended sword
Before him through the city, he forbids it,
Being free from vainness and self-glorious pride
Shakesp.

You promis'd
To lay aside self-harming heaviness,
And entertain a cheerful disposition Shak Rich. III

In their anger they slew a man, and in their self-will they digged down a wall Genesis xlix 6.

The most ordinary cause of a single life is liberty, especially in certain self-pleasing and humourous minds, which are so sensible of every restraint as to think their girdles and garters to be bonds and shackles Bacon

Hast thou set up nothing in competition with God, no pride, profit, self love, or self-interest of thy own? Duppa.

Up through the spacious palace passed she
To where the king's proudly reposed head,
If any can be soft to tyranny,
And self-tormenting sin, had a soft bed Crashaw

With a joyful willingness these self-loving reformers took possession of all vacant preferments, and with reluctance others parted with their beloved colleges and subsistence Walton

Repent the sin, but if the punishment
Thou canst avoid, self-preservation bids Milton.

Him fast sleeping soon he found,
In labyrinth of many a round self-roll'd Milton

Oft times nothing profits more
Than self-esteem, grounded on just and right,
Well manag'd Milton's Par Lost

Self-knowing, and from thence Magnanimous, to correspond with heav'n. Milton

So virtue giv'n for lost,
Depress and overthrown, as seem'd,
Like that self-begotten bird,
In th' Arabian woods embost,
That no second knows nor third,
And lay ere while a holocaust,
From out her ashy womb now teem'd
Milton's Agonistes.

He sorrows now, repents, and prays contrite,
My motions in him longer than they move,
His heart I know how variable and vain,
Self-left. Milton.

Seneca approves this self-homicide Hakewill

Thyself from flatt'ring self-conceit defend,
Nor what thou dost not know, to know pretend
Denham.

Man's that savage beast, whose mind,
From reason to self-love declin'd,
Delights to prey upon his kind Denham

Farewel, my tears,
And, my just anger, be no more confin'd
To vain complaints or self-devouring silence
Denham.

They are yet more mad to think that men may rest by death, though they die in self-murder, the greatest sin. Graunt

Are not these strange self-delusions, and yet attested by common experience? South's Sermons.

If the image of God is only sovereignty, certainly we have been hitherto much mistaken, and hereafter are to beware of making ourselves unlike God, by too much self-denial and humility South

If a man would have a devout, humble, sin-abhorring, self-denying frame of spirit, he cannot take a more efficacious course to attain it than by praying himself into it. South

Let a man apply himself to the difficult work of self-examination, by a strict scrutiny into the whole estate of his soul South

A fatal self-imposture, such as defeats the design, and destroys the force, of all religion. South

When he intends to bereave the world of an illustrious person, he may cast him upon a bold self-opinioned physician, worse than his distemper, who shall make a shift to cure him into his grave South

Neglect of friends can never be proved rational, till we prove the person using it omnipotent and self-sufficient, and such as can never need any mortal assistance. South.

By all human laws, as well as divine, self-murder has ever been agreed on as the greatest crime Temp.

A self-conceited fop will swallow any thing. L'Estrange

From Atreus though your ancient lineage came,
Yet my self-conscious worth, your high renown,
Your virtue, through the neighb'ring nations blown. Dryden.

He has given you all the commendation which his self-sufficiency could afford to any Dryden.

Below yon sphere
There hangs the ball of earth and water mixt,
Self-center'd and unmov'd Dryden's State of Inn

All these receive their birth from other things,
But from himself the phœnix only springs,
Self-born, begotten by the parent flame
In which he burn'd, another and the same Dryd

The burning fire, that shone so bright,
Flew off all sudden with extinguish'd light,
And left one altar dark, a little space,
Which turn'd, self-kindled, and renew'd the blaze Dryder

Thou first, O king! release the rights of sway,
Pow'r, self-restrain'd, the people best obey Dryden

Eighteen and nineteen are equal to thirty-seven, by the same self-evidence that one and two are equal to three. Locke

A contradiction of what has been said, is a mark of yet greater pride and self-conceitedness, when we take upon us to set another right in his story Locke

I am as justly accountable for any action done many years since, appropriated to me now by this self-consciousness, as I am for what I did the last moment. Locke

SE'NSE n s [sens, Fr sensus, Lat.]

1 Faculty or power by which external objects are perceived, the sight, touch, hearing, smell, taste

This power is sense, which from abroad doth bring
The colour, taste, and touch, and scent, and sound,
The quantity and shape of every thing
Within earth's centre or heaven's circle found
And though things sensible be numberless,
But only five the sense's organs be,
And in those five all things their forms express,
Which we can touch, taste, feel, or hear, or see
Davies

Then is the soul a nature, which contains
The pow'r of sense within a greater pow'r,
Which doth employ and use the sense's pains,
But sits and rules within her private bow'r. Davies

Both contain
Within them every lower faculty
Of sense, whereby they hear, see, smell, touch, taste Milton

Of the five senses, two are usually and most properly called the senses of learning, as being most capable of receiving communication of thought and notices by selected signs and these are hearing and seeing Holder's Elements of Speech

2. Perception by the senses, sensation

In a living creature, though never so great, the sense and the effects of any one part of the body instantly make a transcursion throughout the whole Bacon's Natural History

If we had nought but sense, then only they
Should have sound minds which have their senses sound,
But wisdom grows when senses do decay,
And folly most in quickest sense is found Davies

Such is the mighty swiftness of your mind,
That, like the earth's, it leaves the sense behind.
Dryden

3. Perception of intellect; apprehension of mind

This Basilius, having the quick sense of a lover, took as though his mistress had given him a secret reprehension Sidney

God, to remove his ways from human sense,
Plac'd heav'n from earth so far Milton.

Oppress nature sleeps
This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken senses.
Shakesp.

God hath endued mankind with powers and abilities which we call natural light and reason, and common sense Bentley.

There's something previous even to taste; 'tis sense,
Good sense, which only is the gift of heav'n,
And, though no science, fairly worth the seven:
A light within yourself you must perceive,
Jones and Le Notre have it not to give Pope.

6. Reason, reasonable meaning.

He raves, his words are loose
As heaps of sand, and scattering wide from sense:
You see he knows not me, his natural father;
That now the wind has got into his head,
And turns his brains to frenzy Dryd Span. Fryar.

7 Opinion; notion; judgment.

I speak my private but impartial sense,
With freedom, and, I hope, without offence.
Roscommon.

Sententious showers! O let them fall!
Their cadence is rhetorical Crashaw

Eloquence, with all her pomp and charms,
Foretold us useful and sententious truths. Waller

How he apes his aire,
Ambitiously sententious! Addison's Cato

2. Comprising sentences

The making of figures being tedious, and requiring much room, put men first upon contracting them, as by the most ancient Egyptian monuments it appears they did next, instead of sententious marks, to think of verbal, such as the Chinese still retain Grew's Cosmologia.

SENTE'NTIOUSLY. adv. [from sententious] In short sentences; with striking brevity.

They describe her in part finely and elegantly, and in part gravely and sententiously they say, look how many feathers she hath, so many eyes she hath underneath Bacon's Essays

Nausicaa delivers her judgment sententiously, to give it more weight Broome

SENTE'NTIOUSNESS n. s. [from sententious] Pithiness of sentences; brevity with strength.

The Medea I esteem for the gravity and sententiousness of it, which he himself concludes to be suitable to a tragedy. Dryden.

SE'NTERY. n. s. [This is commonly written sentry, corrupted from sentinel.] One who is set to watch in a garrison, or in the outlines of an army.

What strength, what art, can then
Suffice, or what evasion bear him safe
Through the strict senteries, and stations thick
Of angels watching round? Milton.

SE'NTIENT adj. [sentiens, Lat.] Perceiving; having perception.

This acting of the sentient phantasy is performed by a presence of sense, as the horse is under the sense of hunger, and that, without any formal syllogism, presseth him to eat. Hale.

SE'NTIENT. n. s. [from the adjective.] He that has perception.

If the sentient be carried, pasibus equis, with the body whose motion it would observe, supposing it regular, the remove is insensible Glanville's Scepsis

SE'NTIMENT. n. s. [sentiment, Fr.]

1. Thought, notion; opinion.

The consideration of the reason why they are annexed to so many other ideas, serving to give us due sentiments of the wisdom and goodness of the sovereign Disposer of all things, may not be unsuitable to the main end of these enquiries Locke

Alike to council or th' assembly came,
With equal souls and sentiments the same Pope

2. The sense considered distinctly from the language or things, a striking sentence in a composition.

Those who could no longer defend the conduct of Cato, praised the sentiments. Dennis

SENTINEL. n. s. [sentinelle, Fr from sentio, Lat] One who watches or keeps guard to prevent surprise

Norfolk, hie thee to thy charge,
Use careful watch, chuse trusty sentinels
Shakesp Richard III

Counsellors are not commonly so united, but that one counsellor keepeth sentinel over another, so that if any do counsel out of faction or private ends, it commonly goes to the king's ear Bacon's Essays

First, the two eyes, which have the seeing pow'r,
Stand as one watchman, spy, or sentinel,
Being plac'd aloft, within the head's high tow'r,
And though both see, yet both but one thing tell Davies

Love to our citadel resorts,
Through those deceitful sallyports
Our sentinels betray our forts Denham.

The senses are situated in the head, as sentinels in a watchtower, to receive and convey to the soul the impressions of external objects Ray on the Creation.

Perhaps they had sentinels waking while they slept, but even this would be unsoldierlike Browne

SE'NTRY n s [corrupted, I believe, from sentinel]

1. A watch, a sentinel, one who watches in a garrison, or army, to keep them from surprise.

If I do send, dispatch
Those centries to our aid, the rest will serve
For a short holding Shakesp Coriolanus.

The youth of hell strict guard may keep,
And set their sentries to the utmost deep Dryden

One goose they had, 'twas all they could allow,
A wakeful sentry, and on duty now Dryden.

2. Guard; watch, the duty of a sentry.

Thou, whose nature cannot sleep,
O'er my slumbers sentry keep,
Guard me 'gainst those watchful foes,
Whose eyes are open while mine close. Brown
Here toils and death, and death's half-brother, sleep,
Forms terrible to view, their sentry keep Dryden.

Which thou, alas! and thine, are born to know Pope

SERIOUS adj [serieux, Fr serius, Lat]

1 Grave, solemn, not volatile, not light of behaviour

Ah! my friends while we laugh all things are serious round about us God is serious who exerciseth patience towards us Christ is serious who shed his blood for us, the Holy Ghost is serious, who striveth against the obstinacy of our hearts the holy Scriptures bring to our ears the most serious things in the world, the Holy Sacraments represent the most serious and awful matters the whole creation is serious in serving God and us all that are in heaven or hell are serious! then can we be gay To give these excellent words their full force, it should be known that they came not from the priesthood, but the court and from a courtier as eminent as England ever boasted Young

2 Important, weighty; not trifling

I'll hence to London on a serious matter Shakesp Henry VI

There's nothing serious in mortality,
All is but toys Shakesp Macbeth

SE'RIOUSLY adv [from serious] Gravely, solemnly, in earnest; without levity

It cannot but be matter of very dreadful consideration to any one, sober and in his wits, to think seriously with himself, what horror and confusion must needs surprise that man, at the last day of account, who had led his whole life by one rule, when God intends to judge him by another South

All laugh to find
Unthinking plainness so o'erspread thy mind,
That thou could'st seriously persuade the crowd
To keep their oaths, and to believe a God Dryden

Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Lactantius, and Arnobius, tell us, that this martyrdom first of all made them seriously inquisitive into that religion, which could indue the mind with so much strength, and overcome the fear of death, nay, raise an earnest desire of it, though it appeared in all its terrors Addison

SERIOUSNESS n. s. [from serious] Gravity, solemnity, earnest attention.

That spirit of religion and seriousness vanished all at once, and a spirit of libertinism and profaneness started up in the room of it Atterb Sermons

The youth was received at the door by a servant, who then conducted him with great silence and seriousness to a long gallery, which was darkened at noon-day. Addison's Spectator

SE'RMON. n. s. [sermon, Fr. sermo, Lat.] A discourse of instruction pronounced by a divine for the edification of the people

As for our sermons, be they never so sound and perfect, God's word they are not, as the sermons of the prophets were, no, they are but ambiguously termed his word, because his word is commonly the subject whereof they treat, and must be the rule whereby they are framed Hooker

This our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing
Shakesp

Sermons he heard, yet not so many
As left no time to practise any
He heard them reverently, and then
His practice preach'd them o'er again.
Crashaw

Many, while they have preached Christ in their sermons, have read a lecture of atheism in their practice South

His preaching much, but more his practice wrought,
A living sermon of the truths he taught. Dryden.

To* SE'RMON v. a [sermoner, Fr. from the noun.]

1. To discourse as in a sermon

Nothing wants, but that thy shape
Like his, and colour serpentine, may shew
Thy inward fraud Milton's Paradise Lost

The figures and their parts ought to have a serpentine and flaming form naturally these sorts of outlines have I know not what of life and seeming motion in them, which very much resembles the activity of the flame and serpent Dryden

2 Winding like a serpent, anfractuous.

Nor can the sun
Perfect a circle, or maintain his way
One inch direct, but where he rose to-day
He comes no more, but with a cozening line
Steals by that point, and so is serpentine Donne

His hand th' adorn'd firmament display'd,
Those serpentine yet constant motions made
Sandys

How many spacious countries doth the Rhine,
In winding banks, and mazes serpentine,
Traverse, before he splits in Belgia's plain,
And, lost in sand, creeps to the German main!
Blackmoor

SE'RVITUDE. n. s. [servitude, Fr. servitus, Lat]

1 Slavery, state of a slave, dependance

Aristotle speaketh of men, whom nature hath framed for the state of servitude, saying, They have reason so far forth as to conceive what others direct them Hooker.

You would have sold your king to slaughter,
His princes and his peers to servitude,
His subjects to oppression and contempt Shakesp. Henry V.

Unjustly thou depriv'st it with the name
Of servitude, to serve whom God ordains,
Or nature God and nature bid the same,
When he who rules is worthiest. Milton.

Though it is necessary that some persons in the world should be in love with a splendid servitude, yet certainly they must be much beholding to their own fancy, that they can be pleased at it; for he that rises up early, and goes to bed late, only to receive addresses, is really as much abridged in his freedom, as he that waits to present one South.

2. Servants collectively. Not in use.

After him a cumb'rous train
Of herds, and flocks, and numerous servitude. Milton.

SE'RUM n. s. [Lat.]

1. The thin and watery part that separates from the rest in any liquor, as in milk the whey from the cream.

2. The part of the blood which in coagulation separates from the grume.

Blood is the most universal juice in an animal body the red part of it differs from the serum, the serum from the lymph, the lymph from the nervous juice, and that from the several other humours separated in the glands Arbuthnot

SESQUIA'LTER. } adj. [sesquialtere,
SESQUIA'LTERAL. } Fr. sesquialter, Lat]

In geometry, is a ratio where one quantity or number contains another once and half as much more, as 6 and 9 Dict.

In all the revolutions of the planets about the sun, and of the secondary planets about the primary ones, the periodical times are in a sesquialter proportion to the mean distance Cheyne

As the six primary planets revolve about the sun, so the secondary ones are moved about them, in the same sesquialteral proportion of their periodical motions to their orbs Bentley

SESQUIPE'DAL. } adj. [sesquipedalis,
SESQUIPEDA'LIAN. } Lat.] Containing a foot and a half

As for my own part, I am but a sesquipedal, having only six foot and a half of stature Addison's Guardian

Hast thou ever measured the gigantick Ethiopian, whose stature is above eight cubits high, or the sesquipedalian pigmy? Arbuthnot and Pope

SE'SQUIPLICATE adj [In mathematicks] Is the proportion one quantity or number has to another, in the ratio of one half

The periodical times of the planets are in sesquiplicate proportion, and not a duplicate proportion of the distances from the center or the radii, and consequently the planets cannot be carried about by an harmonically circulating fluid Cheyne's Philosophical Principles

SESQUITE'RTIAN [In mathematicks.] Having such a ratio, as that one quantity or number contains another once and one third part more, as between 6 and 8. Dict.

SESS. n. s. [for assess, cess, or cense] Rate, cess charged; tax.

His army was so ill paid and governed, as the English suffered more damage by the sess of his soldiers, than they gained profit or security by abating the pride of their enemies Davies's History of Ireland

SESSION. n s. [session, Fr. sessio, Lat.]

1. The act of sitting.

He hath as man, not as God only, a supreme dominion over quick and dead, for so much his ascension into heaven, and his session at the right hand of God, do import. Hooker

Many, though they concede a table-gesture, will hardly allow this usual way of session
Brown's Vulgar Errours

2. A stated assembly of magistrates or senators.

They are ready t' appear
Where you shall hold your session
Shakesp. King Lear

Summon a session, that we may arraign
Our most disloyal lady Shakesp

The old man, mindful still of moan,
Weeping, thus bespake the session
Chapman's Odyssey

Of their session ended they but cry
The great result. Milton.

Call'd to council all the Achaian states,
Nor herald sworn the session to proclaim.
Pope's Odyssey

3. The space for which an assembly sits, without intermission or recess.

It was contrary to the course of parliament, that any bill that had been rejected should be again preferred the same session Clarendon

The second Nicene council affords us plentiful assistance in the first session, wherein the pope's vicar declares that Meletius was ordained by Arian bishops, and yet his ordination was never questioned Stilling fleet

Many decrees are enacted, which at the next session are repealed Norris

4. A meeting of justices: as, the sessions of the peace.

SESTERCE n. s. [sesterce, Fr. sestertium, Lat.] Among the Romans, a sum of about 8*l.* 1*s* 5*d.* half-penny sterling Dict

Several of them would rather chuse a sum in sesterces, than in pounds sterling Addison on Medals

Rocks, waters, woods, and by the shaggy tops
Uplifting, bore them in their hands
Milton's Paradise Lost
There, where very desolation dwells,
By grots and caverns shagg'd with horrid shades,
She may pass on with unblench'd majesty,
Be it not done in pride Milton
Through Eden went a river large,
Nor chang'd his course, but through the shaggy hill
Pass'd underneath engulph'd Milton
How would the old king smile
To see you weigh the paws when tipt with gold,
And throw the shaggy spoils about your shoulders
Addison
Ye rugged rocks! which holy knees have worn
Ye grots and caverns shagg'd with horrid thorn!
Pope

SHALE. n s [corrupted, I think, for shell.] A husk; the case of seeds in siliquous plants.

Behold yon poor and starved band,
And your fair shew shall suck away their souls,
Leaving them but the shales and husks of men.
Shakesp

SHALL. verb defect. [ꝛceal, Sax. is originally I owe, or I ought. In Chaucer, the faithe I shall to God, means the faith I owe to God: thence it became a sign of the future tense. The French use devoir, dois, doit, in the same manner, with a kind of future signification; and the Swedes have skall, and the Islanders skal, in the same sense. It has no tenses but shall future, and should imperfect.

The explanation of shall, which foreigners and provincials confound with will, is not easy, and the difficulty is increased by the poets, who sometimes give to shall an emphatical sense of will: but I shall endeavour, cassâ Minervâ, to show the meaning of shall in the future tense.]

1 I shall love. It will so be that I must love; I am resolved to love.

2. Shall I love? Will it be permitted me to love? Will you permit me to love? Will it be that I must love?

3. Thou shalt love. I command thee to love; it is permitted thee to love; [in poetry or solemn diction] it will be that thou must love

4. Shalt thou love? Will it be that thou must love? Will it be permitted to thee to love?

5. He shall love. It will be that he must love, it is commanded him that he love.

It is a mind, that shall remain
—Shall remain!
Hear you this triton of the minnows? Mark you
His absolute shall? Shakesp Coriolanus.

See Romulus the great
This prince a priestess of your blood shall bear,
And, like his sire, in arms he shall appear
Dryden's Æneid.

That he shall receive no benefit from Christ, is the affirmation where all his despair is founded: and the one way of removing this dismal apprehension, is, to convince him that Christ's death, and the benefits thereof, either do, or, if he perform the condition required of him, shall certainly belong to him Hammond's Fundamentals.

6. Shall he love? Is it permitted him to love? [in solemn language.] Will it be that he must love?

7. The plural persons follow the signification of the singulars.

The man i' th' moon! A most poor credulous monster. Shakesp

The king was neither so shallow nor so ill advertised as not to perceive the intention of the French king, for the investing himself of Britaigne
Bacon's Henry VII

Uncertain and unsettled he remains,
Deep vers'd in books, and shallow in himself. Mist.

One would no more wonder to see the most shallow nation of Europe the most vain, than to find the most empty fellows in every nation more conceited than the rest. Addison.

3. Not deep of sound.

If a virginal were made with a double concave, the one all the length of the virginal, and the other at the end of the strings, as the harp hath, it must make the sound perfecter, and not so shallow and jarring Bacon

SHA'LLOW. n. s. [from the adjective.] A shelf; a sand; a flat; a shoal; a place where the water is not deep.

I should not see the sandy hour-glass run,
But I should think of shallows and of flats,
And see my wealthy Andrew dock'd in sand,
Veiling her high top lower than her ribs,
To kiss her burial Shakesp Coriolanus.

A swift stream is not heard in the channel, but upon shallows of gravel Bacon's Nat Hist.

Having but newly left those grammatick flats and shallows, where they stuck unreasonably, to learn a few words with lamentable construction, and now on the sudden transported, to be toss'd with their unballasted wits in fathomless and unquiet deeps of controversy, they do grow into hatred of learning Milton.

You that so oft have sounded
And fathom'd all his thoughts, that know the deeps
And shallows of his heart, should need no instruments
To advance your ends. Denham.

He sounds and fathoms him, to find
The shallows of his soul. Dryden's Spanish Fryar

The wary Dutch
Behind their treach'rous shallows now withdraw,
And there lay snares to catch the British host. Dry

Three more fierce Eurus in his angry mood
Dash'd on the shallows of the moving sand,
And in mid ocean left them moor'd a-land.
Dryden's Æneid.

In arms of the sea, and among islands, there is no great depth, and some places are plain shallows. Burnet

Their spawn being lighter than the water, there it would not sink to the bottom, but be buoyed up by it, and carried away to the shallows Ray on the Creation.

With the use of diligence, and prudent conduct, he may decline both rocks and shallows. Norris.

The sea could not be much narrower than it is, without a great loss to the world, and must we now have an ocean of mere flats and shallows, to the utter ruin of navigation? Bentley

SHA'LLOWBRAINED, adj [shallow and brain.] Foolish; futile; trifling; empty

It cannot but be matter of just indignation to all good men, to see a company of lewd shallow-brained huffs making atheism, and contempt of religion, the sole badge of wit. South.

And all cool simples that sweet rest bestow;
Night from the plants their sleepy virtue drains,
And passing sheds it on the silent plains. Dryden.
You seem to mourn another lover dead,
My sighs you gave him, and my tears you shed.
Dryden.
Unhappy man! to break the pious laws
Of nature, pleading in his children's cause!
'Tis love of honour, and his country's good;
The consul, not the father, sheds the blood. Dryd.
In these lone walls, their days eternal bound,
These moss-grown domes with spiry turrets crown'd,
Where awful arches make a noon-day night,
And the dim windows shed a solemn light,
Thy eyes diffus'd a reconciling ray,
And gleams of glory brighten'd all the day. Pope.

2. To scatter; to let fall.

Trees that bring forth their leaves late, and cast them late, are more lasting than those that sprout their leaves early, or shed them betimes.
Bacon's Natural History.
So the returning year be blest,

And do not sheer the fleeces that I graze Shak.
A shepherd next,
More meek, came with the firstlings of his flock.
Milton.

2. A swain; a rural lover.
If that the world and love were young,
And truth in ev'ry shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move,
To live with thee and be thy love. Raleigh.

3. One who tends the congregation; a pastor.
Lead up all those who heard thee, and believ'd,
'Midst thy own flock, great shepherd, be receiv'd,
And glad all heaven with millions thou hast sav'd.
Prior.

SHE'PHERDESS. n. s. [from shepherd.] A woman that tends sheep; a rural lass.
She put herself into the garb of a shepherdess, and in that disguise lived many years, but, discovering herself a little before her death, did profess herself the happiest person alive, not for her condition, but in enjoying him she first loved, and that she would rather, ten thousand times, live a shepherdess in contentment and satisfaction.
Sidney.
These your unusual weeds to each part of you
Do give a life no shepherdess, but Flora
Peering in April's front. Shakesp. Winter's Tale
She like some shepherdess did shew,
Who sat to bathe her by a river's side Dryden.
His dorick dialect has incomparable sweetness in its clownishness, like a fair shepherdess in country russet. Dryden.

Behind him cast; the broad circumference
Hung on his shoulders like the moon. Milton

2. One that gives protection or security.

3. Defence; protection.

The terror of the Trojan land,
The Grecian honour, ornament, and shield,
High on a pile th' unconquer'd chief is plac'd. Dry

To SHIELD. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To cover with a shield.

2. To defend; to protect; to secure.

Were 't my fitness
To let these hands obey my boiling blood,
They're apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones howe'er a woman's shape
Doth shield thee. Shakesp. King Lear

Shouts of applause ran ringing through the field,
To see the son the vanquish'd father shield. Dryd.

Hear one that comes to shield his injur'd honour,
And guard his life with hazard of her own. Smith.

3. To keep off; to defend against.

Out of their cold caves and frozen habitations,
Into the sweet soil of Europe, they brought with them their usual weeds, fit to shield the cold to which they had been inured. Spenser

My lord, I must intreat the time alone.
—God shield I should disturb devotion Shakesp.

To SHIFT. v. n. [Of this word the original is obscure: skipta, Runick, is to change.]

1. To change place.

Vegetables being fixed to the same place, and so not able to shift and seek out after proper matter for their increment, it was necessary that it should be brought to them. Woodward

2. To change; to give place to other things.

Death was half glad when he had got him down.
Milton.

SHI'FTLESS. adj. [from shift.] Wanting expedients; wanting means to act or live.

For the poor shiftless irrationals, it is a prodigious act of the great Creator's indulgence, that they are all ready furnished with such clothing.
Derham's Physico Theology

SHI'LLING. n. s. [ꝛcylling, Sax. and Erse; schelling, Dut.] A coin of various value in different times. It is now twelve pence.

Five of these pence made their shilling, which they called scilling, probably from scillingus, which the Romans used for the fourth part of an ounce, and forty-eight of these scillings made their pound, and four hundred of these pounds were a legacy for a king's daughter, as appeareth by the last will of king Alfred. Camden's Remains

The very same shilling may at one time pay twenty men in twenty days, and at another rest in the same hands one hundred days Locke

Who, with much pains exerting all his sense,
Can range aright his shillings, pounds, and pence.
Young

SHILL-I-SHALL-I. A corrupt reduplication of shall I? The question of a man hesitating. To stand shill-I-shall-I, is to continue hesitating and procrastinating.

I am somewhat dainty in making a resolution, because when I make it, I keep it I don't stand shill-I-shall-I then if I say 't, I'll do 't.
Congreve's Way of the World

Her eldest sister is so curst and shrewd,
That till the father rids his hands of her,
Your love must live a maid Shakesp.

2. Maliciously sly; cunning; more artful than good

It was a shrewd saying of the old monk, that two kind of prisons would serve for all offenders, an inquisition and a bedlam if any man should deny the being of a God, and the immortality of the soul, such a one should be put into the first, as being a desperate heretick, but if any man should profess to believe these things, and yet allow himself in any known wickedness, such a one should be put into bedlam Tillotson
A spiteful saying gratifies so many little passions, that it meets with a good reception, and the man who utters it is looked upon as a shrewd satirist Addison.
Corruption proceeds from employing those who have the character of shrewd worldly men, instead of such as have had a liberal education, and trained up in virtue. Addison.

3. Bad; ill betokening.

Scarce any man passes to a liking of sin in others, but by first practising it himself, and consequently we may take it for a shrewd indication, and sign, whereby to judge of those who have shined with too much caution, to suffer the world to charge sins directly upon their conversation. South.

4. Painful; pinching; dangerous; mischievous.

Every of this number,
That have endur'd shrewd nights and days with us,
Shall share the good of our return'd fortune. Shak.
When a man thinks he has a servant, he finds a traitor that eats his bread, and is readier to do him a mischief, and a shrewd turn, than an open adversary South.
No enemy is so despicable but he may do a body a shrewd turn L'Estrange.

SHRE'WDLY. adv. [from shrewd]

I'd shriek, that even your ears should rift to hear me. Shakesp

In a dreadful dream
I saw my lord so near destruction,
Then shriek'd myself awake. Denham
Hark! peace!
At this she shriek'd aloud, the mournful train
Echo'd her grief Dryden's Knight's Tale
Why did you shriek out? Dryden's Span. Fryar

SHRIEK. n. s. [skricg, Dan. scriccio, Ital.] An inarticulate cry of anguish or horrour.

Una hearing evermore
His rueful shrieks and groanings, often tore
Her guiltless garments, and her golden hair,
For pity of his pain. Fairy Queen.
Time has been, my senses would have cool'd,
To hear a night shriek, and my fell of hair,
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir
As life were in't. Shakesp. Macb
The corps of Almon and the rest are shown,
Shrieks, clamours, murmurs, fill the frighted town
Dryden

SHRIFT. n. s. [rcpiꝑt, Sax.] Confession made to a priest. A word out of use.

Off with
Bernardine's head: I'll give a present shrift,
And will advise him for a better place Shakesp.
My lord shall never rest,
I'll watch him tame, and talk him out
His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift Shak.
The duke's commands were absolute,
Therefore, my lord, address you to your shrift,
And be yourself, for you must die this instant.
Rowe

SHRIGHT, for shrieked. Spenser

SHRILL. adj. [a word supposed to be made per onopatopœiam, in imitation of the thing expressed, which indeed it images very happily] Sounding with a piercing, tremulous, or vibratory sound

The hounds shall make the welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth Sha.
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill sounding throat
Awake the god of day. Shakesp Hamlet

Up springs the lark, shrill voic'd and loud
Thomson

To SHRILL. v. n. [from the adjective.] To pierce the ear with sharp and quick vibrations of sound.

The sun of all the world is dim and dark
O heavy herse!
Breake we our pipes that shrill'd as loud as lark,
O careful verse! Spenser.
Hark how the minstrels 'gin to shrill aloud
Their merry musick that resounds from far,
The pipe, the tabor, and the trembling crowd,
That well agree withouten breach or jar. Spenser
A shrilling trumpet sounded from on high,
And unto battle bade themselves address. Shakesp
Here no clarion's shrilling note
The muse's green retreat can pierce,
The grove, from noisy camps remote,
Is only vocal with my verse.
Fenton's Ode to Lord Gower
The females round,
Maids, wives, and matrons, mix a shrilling sound.
Pope.

Thus are my eyes still captive to one sight,
Thus all my thoughts are slaves to one thought still.
Sidney.

Them seem'd they never saw a sight so fair
Of fowls so lovely, that they sure did deem
Them heavenly born. Spenser

Not an eye
But is a-weary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more.
Shakespeare.

Moses said, I will turn aside and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt. Exodus, iii. 3.

I took a felucca at Naples to carry me to Rome, that I might not run over the same sights a second time.

Not proud Olympus yields a nobler sight,
Though gods assembled grace his tow'ring height,
Than what more humble mountains offer here,
Where, in their blessings, all those gods appear.
Pope.

Before you pass th' imaginary sights
Of lords, and earls, and dukes, and garter'd knights,
While the spread fan o'ershades your closing eyes,
Then give one flirt, and all the vision flies. Pope.
